DESCRIPTION:

This research seminar provides a broad grounding in American Indian law, history and literature through an exploration of the remarkable life and times of Flathead author, intellectual and activist DꞑArcy McNickle (1904-1977). We will read DꞑArcy McNickle's novels, short stories, histories and essays, as well as secondary works about him. Even better, we will be working with DꞑArcy McNickle's handwritten and heretofore unpublished diary. You will have an opportunity to transcribe and contextualize passages and then share (probably through digital technologies) what you have learned about history, law, literature (and much, much more) through his life story. Rather than just being a passive recipient of information, you will be creator of new knowledge!

REGISTRATION PROCEDURES:

Beginning in mid-April 2019, incoming first-year (FY) students will fill out an academic interest survey, which allows students to share their top ten FYS preferences, as well as preferences for other courses with seats reserved for the FY pre-registration process. Beginning in early summer, FY students will

Introduction to the Histories and Cultures of Native America; surveys American Indian history from the period before European contact to the present. We will learn about the diverse and oftentimes surprising ways in which the peoples indigenous to North America negotiated dramatic changes in their lives. To meet this challenging goal, we will learn how to think ethnohistorically and ethnomethodologically. In other words, we will draw insights from multiple disciplines, including history, archaeology, anthropology, sociology, literature, and material culture, to understand how people made sense of the worlds in

This course introduces students to a wide range of topics covering food studies taught by faculty across the UNC campus as well as from Duke, NC State and outside of an academic setting. The overall objective of this course is to provide an overview of how individuals, communities, and societies produce, distribute, and eat food. This inter-disciplinary course will examine cultural, political, economic, environmental, and geographic approaches to food within local, national, and global contexts. Topics include food politics, food in the arts, land use, how we eat through time, culture and religious food values as well as a basic understanding of physiological concepts of nutrition. Students will explore:

Writing Through Difficult Subjects explores literary forms that contemporary authors use to make meaning of the worlds they live in. Students will compose creative works and critical essays to respond to texts that touch on a wide range of subjects, including addiction, sexuality, family, welfare, and love. Readings include poetry and prose by Lucille Clifton, Gabrielle Calvocoressi, Eduardo C. Corral, Etheridge Knight, Larry Levis, Kayleb Rae Candrilli, Sharon Olds, Meredith Russo, and Casey Plett.

Tyree Daye is the winner of the APR/Honickman First Book Prize for River Hymns (American Poetry Review, 2017) and the recipient of a 2019 Whiting Award in poetry

This course is cross-listed with ASIA 691H
AMST 691H is a research and methods course designed to help senior American Studies and Asian Studies majors research and write an honors thesis. Our objectives are to review some major issues in Asian and American Studies and interdisciplinary area studies in general, investigate how each student's research topic fits into these larger debates, review the writing conventions of the appropriate discipline and field, and help students produce innovative, insightful, and articulate research essays. EE.
Students who complete and successfully defend an honors thesis will graduate with honors. American Studies and Asian Studies students will also participate in the senior colloquium in the spring, where each student will give a short presentation summarizing their thesis research. Completed theses will be entered into the Carolina Digital Repository.
Students writing an honors thesis will be enrolled in AMST 691H and ASIA 691H by the department once their thesis applications have been approved.

THE HISTORY AND PRACTICES OF AMERICAN STUDIES:

The History and Practices of American Studies will acquaint students with the development of American Studies as an interdisciplinary field from its earliest days as an academic discipline to the present. The course will trace the emergence of American Studies as a discrete discipline within the academy and its subsequent radical reinventions as it engaged with central questions of American identity and exceptionalism. Readings will consist of roughly chronological scholarly works that provide an understanding of American Studies as it has grown from its beginnings as well as more popular works that both speak to questions of American identity and exceptionalism and that are often studied by American Studies scholars. Graduate students from American Studies are required to take this course in their first semester, however graduate students from other disciplines are especially invited to join in the conversation as well.

AMST 715, Community Histories and Public Humanities, engages students from a wide range of disciplinary interests with the ways that communities (in the broadest sense) have been, are, and might be preserved, documented, represented, understood, and remembered. Each offering of AMST 715 draws upon the instructor's own experience and practice of public history, public humanities, and community archiving initiatives.

This offering of the course focuses on the origin and history of the public insane asylum in the United States, taking advantage of the UNC Community Histories Workshop's two year-long excavation of the records of the North Carolina Insane Asylum in Raleigh, NC (officially renamed the Dorothea Dix Hospital in 1959). The site of Dix Hospital is being transformed by the City of Raleigh into one of the most ambitious public park projects in the U.S. The CHW has created what we believe to be the first comprehensive, searchable patient database of a nineteenth-century American insane asylum, some 7200 admissions between 1856 and 1918. Complementing the database is a collection of some 5500 extended intake forms (1887-1918), and hospital/state administrative records, including a hospital cemetery inventory of more than 700 interred patients, minutes of hospital board meetings, comprehensive

FOLK 077H.001 | The Poetic Roots of Hip Hop

TR, 11:00 am - 12:15 pm. Instructor(s): Glenn Hinson. Enrollment = 24.

There ain't nothing new about rapping. That's what elders from a host of African American communities declared when hip-hop first exploded onto the scene. This new form, they claimed, was just a skilled re-working of poetic forms that had been around for generations. Each elder seemed to point to a different form: some to the wordplay of rhyming radio deejays, others to the bawdy flow of streetcorner poets, still others to the rhymed storytelling of sanctified singers. And each was right; elegant rhyming has indeed marked African American talk for generations. Yet because most such rhyming was spoken, its history remains hidden. In this seminar, we'll explore this lost history, talking to poets and hip-hop emcees while probing the archives to uncover the hidden heritage of African American eloquence. Our goal is nothing short of writing the prehistory of hip-hop, and in so doing demonstrating rhyme's longstanding role as a key marker of African American identity.

ENGLISH/FOLK/ANTHRO 202

Course Description:

This course introduces students to the principles and practices of folklore through the veritable treasure trove of Scottish Gaelic cultural heritage. Through ethnographic documentary evidence from twentieth- and twenty-first century fieldwork carried out on both sides of the Atlantic our focus here is given to traditions orally and aurally expressed and transmitted at the hearthside of the taigh céilidh (visiting-house) over multiple generations. From the shores of Scotland's Highlands and Hebrides and Canada's Maritime Provinces to the sand hills of North Carolina's Cape Fear River students will trace the survival, adaptation, demise and revival of various forms of shared knowledge among Gaels at home and in the diaspora. Topics will include but are not limited to the human landscape, place and personal names, supernatural belief, ritual year, songs, folktales, as well as music and dance, each functioning as driving forces in the communication of collective identity and forging social bonds. Through such rooted experience within this internationally

ANTH 053H.001 | Darwin's Dangerous Idea

TR, 9:30 am - 10:45 am. Instructor(s): Paul Leslie. Enrollment = 24.

Darwin's theory of evolution by natural selection is central to one of the most profound revolutions in the history of thought, generating stunning insights but also some misunderstanding and tragic abuse. This seminar aims to provide a clear understanding of how natural selection works, and how it doesn't. We will examine objections to the theory; how the environmental and health problems we face today reflect processes of natural selection; and recent attempts to understand why we get sick, how we respond to disease, why we get old, why we choose mates the way we do, and more. Class sessions will feature a mix of lecture and discussion of concepts and issues. Students will also engage in small group projects; cooperative explorations of problems raised in class or in the readings and/or designing mini research projects.

FIRST YEAR STUDENTS ONLY.

DESCRIPTION:

With the United States as our geographic focus, this seminar explores a range of 20th- and early-21st-century American Indian topics and current issues. We look at Indian casinos, tribal colleges, identity, gender, tribal courts, sports, and other topics. An exploration of the history of American Indians before and after the arrival of Europeans, a history with which we begin the seminar, provides essential background for looking at the present and recent past. This seminar will help students better understand the challenges facing American Indian communities both internally and externally and the creative solutions being forged to address these challenges. It will also help students further develop skills in reading, writing, critical analysis, and public speaking.

REGISTRATION PROCEDURES:

Beginning in mid-April 2019, incoming first-year (FY) students will fill out an academic interest survey, which allows students to share their top ten FYS

ANTH 066H.001 | Saving the World? Humanitarianism in Action

MWF, 11:15 am - 12:05 pm. Instructor(s): Peter Redfield. Enrollment = 24.

What happens when people try to ¿do good¿, especially at a global scale? In this seminar we will explore international aid, with an emphasis on its medical end and the set of organizations and institutions that exist to offer assistance to people suffering from disaster, endemic poverty and health disparities. The current aid complex includes a wide variety of forms and activities, from large bureaucracies to tiny NGOs, massive health campaigns to lonely clinics. We will approach this phenomenon from the critical and comparative perspective of anthropology, focusing on actual human practice. Which forms of suffering receive international attention, and which do not? How do money and services flow and stop relative to inequality? What range of outcomes do different aid projects produce?

Over the semester we will engage in two collective endeavors. First, to better situate current problems, we will review the background history of

TITLE: Transforming Our Food Systems

GEN EDS: SS, NA

DESCRIPTION:

This course employs an anthropological approach to the study of the human relationship to food, to contemporary food systems, and to the processes by which they are transformed. First, we consider how an anthropological (and especially ethnographic) approach to the study of food asks questions about food¿s connection to culture, to self, to home and family, to cultural heritage, to cities and to politics. Second, we explore how to study contemporary ¿food systems¿ using an anthropological approach. Third, we examine the challenges facing contemporary food systems such as hunger, the intensive use of energy and agro-industry, the abuse of food laborers, and GMO¿s, toxins and wastes as products of agro-industrialism. Finally, we explore several social movements

FOLK / ENGL / ANTH 202

Course Description:

This course introduces students to the principles and practices of folklore through the veritable treasure trove of Scottish Gaelic cultural heritage. Through ethnographic documentary evidence from twentieth- and twenty-first century fieldwork carried out on both sides of the Atlantic our focus here is given to traditions orally and aurally expressed and transmitted at the hearthside of the taigh céilidh (visiting-house) over multiple generations. From the shores of Scotland's Highlands and Hebrides and Canada's Maritime Provinces to the sand hills of North Carolina's Cape Fear River students will trace the survival, adaptation, demise and revival of various forms of shared knowledge among Gaels at home and in the diaspora. Topics will include but are not limited to the human landscape, place and personal names, supernatural belief, ritual year, songs, folktales, as well as music and dance, each functioning as driving forces in the communication of collective identity and forging social bonds. Through such rooted experience within this internationally endangered ethnolinguistic group, students will deepen their understanding of folklore's role in both deciphering the past and determining its relevance in

APPL 490: Electronics for measurement, control, and the Internet of Things (1 credit hour)

This class builds on the material in APPL 411 Practical Electronics for Everyone. Students learn how to acquire electrical circuits to a computer, perform basic filtering and signal processing, and then control indicators and motors. Students also learn how to develop circuits that are part of the Internet of Things. Students will get hands on experience with electronics in this course.

Prerequisite: APPL 411 or permission of the instructor.

Title: Data Science for Applied Science and Engineering

Description: This course brings together various topics in data science of particular interest for data analysis across different areas of applied science and engineering. Possible topics will include dimensionality reduction, transforms, clustering, classification, and neural networks.

Students should have taken either BMME 410 or MATH 528 prior to taking this course OR be enrolled in one of those courses for this term. Instructor approval

ARTH 055H.001 | Art, Gender, and Power in Early Modern Europe
TR, 9:30 am - 10:45 am. Instructor(s): Tania String. Enrollment = 20.

What did it mean to be a man or to be a woman in the Renaissance? This seminar will explore the ways in which constructions of gender are critical to understandings of the visual arts in the early modern period (c. 1400-1650). We will discuss and analyze a focused group of representations of men and women: portraits, mythological and biblical paintings and sculptures, and even turn our attention to the buildings these men and women inhabited. We will study the work of artists such as Michelangelo, Donatello, Titian, Holbein, and Rubens, amongst others, to find ways of understanding how masculinity and femininity were central concerns in early modern society and in the art produced in this period.

FIRST YEAR STUDENTS ONLY.

NOTE: WAIT LISTING FOR FALL 2019 HONORS COURSES HAS BEEN SUSPENDED. BEGINNING MONDAY, AUGUST 19, YOU MUST OBTAIN WRITTEN INSTRUCTOR PERMISSION FOR ANY HONORS COURSE YOU WISH TO JOIN. YOU ARE REQUIRED TO DELIVER A HARD-COPY OF THE PERMISSION NOTE TO THE HONORS CAROLINA OFFICE IN 225 GRAHAM MEMORIAL.

In this course, we will study the achievements of major artists in the Italian Renaissance from the thirteenth through fifteenth centuries (approx. 1250-1450). We will explore the rise of a highly competitive, historically self-aware artistic tradition, one that laid the basis for modern conceptions of human creativity and modern ideas about visual representation. We will examine Renaissance art as the product of a society in which material and spiritual habits were nurtured by institutions (the city, the state, the Church, merchant and artisan guilds and confraternities, the family) and practices (organized worship and charitable activities, manufacture and trade, marriage and funerary customs). In this society, artists gained special recognition for their contributions to technological innovation, the sciences and the humanities.

The Nude in Renaissance Art

Course Description:

This course will interrogate images of the unclothed body in western art. The nude is one of the most enduring subjects in art and one of the aims of this class will be to try to understand why. Michelangelo's David, Botticelli's Birth of Venus, and Titian's Venus of Urbino all focus on the beautiful naked body. But throughout history there have been occasions when viewers of these works have thought them pornographic. What sorts of problems do we face when dealing with the naked body and how did representations of the naked body become a genre we refer to as the Nude? We will be working with a specific group of images from the collections of the Ackland Art Museum: an exhibition of prints has been mounted for our class and each student will have the unique opportunity to research one Renaissance print in depth.

Seminar Topic: The Bauhaus: Art and Architecture in Interwar Germany, 1919-1933

In Weimar in 1919, the architect Walter Gropius founded the Bauhaus, a school for architecture, design, and the fine arts with an interdisciplinary orientation. The aims of the school were announced in its program: "The Bauhaus strives to bring together all types of artistic creation into a unity, strives for the reunification of all artistic disciplines; sculpture, painting, the applied arts and handicraft; as inseparable components of a new art of building."

Although the Bauhaus existed for only fourteen years, it represents Germany's most internationally successful contribution to the art and culture of modernity. Under directors Walter Gropius, Hannes Meyer, and Ludwig Mies van der Rohe, an outstanding faculty composed of artists and architects was brought together at the school. Its member developed a praxis-oriented workshop concept, propagating a timeless aesthetic and a world design language. They explored

Seminar Topic: Creativity, Classification, Resistance: Art and Colonial Histories

This seminar explores the uses of visual culture as a tool for domination, documentation, and resistance in modern colonial empires (late 19th to mid-20th centuries). Our focus will be on European dominion in Africa, and we will also seek out case studies from other colonial settings to enrich our thematic analyses.

Colonial settings throw into relief the power of visual representation to define and distort cultural difference in order to reinforce power structures. Colonized subjects may also make use of visual culture to push back against these structures, whether by adopting their visual language or by harnessing longstanding local forms to new ends. We will explore the role of visual media in the popular propaganda by which the glories and benefits of empire were presented to European audiences, and to the developing science of ethnography that was ostensibly providing objective documentation of these outposts of

DESCRIPTION:

This seminar will investigate the idea of personal histories in visual art. As a studio class, the course will be organized around several art making projects. As a catalyst to our own art making, we will explore the idea of personal history and memory through readings, as well as looking at contemporary artists whose work functions in an autobiographical framework.

REGISTRATION PROCEDURES:

Beginning in mid-April 2019, incoming first-year (FY) students will fill out an academic interest survey, which allows students to share their top ten FYS preferences, as well as preferences for other courses with seats reserved for the FY pre-registration process. Beginning in early summer, FY students will be pre-registered in two fall 2019 classes based on their interest survey responses and availability of seats. In July 2019, FY students will then have the opportunity to self-enroll in the remaining FYS seats during their assigned course registration dates. On Wednesday, July 31, one day after the last FY

NOTE: WAIT LISTING FOR FALL 2019 HONORS COURSES HAS BEEN SUSPENDED. BEGINNING MONDAY, AUGUST 19, YOU MUST OBTAIN WRITTEN INSTRUCTOR PERMISSION FOR ANY HONORS COURSE YOU WISH TO JOIN. YOU ARE REQUIRED TO DELIVER A HARD-COPY OF THE PERMISSION NOTE TO THE HONORS CAROLINA OFFICE IN 225 GRAHAM MEMORIAL.

ARTS 409H.001 | Art &amp; Science: Merging Printmaking and Biology

MW, 11:15 am - 2:00 pm. Instructor(s): Bob Goldstein / Beth Grabowski. Enrollment = 14.

ARTS409H and BIOL409L together form a single course that brings together art majors and science majors to learn theory and practical skills in both art and science. The title of the class, Art and Science, implies an intersection of the two disciplines. Intrinsic to both is an investment in close observation, experimentation and visual analysis. While organized around meaningful connections between art and science, the course will actively consider disciplinary differences, especially with regard to what constitutes creative and scientific research.

Units in this course are organized according to topics in biology. As students learn specific biological concepts and practical lab skills, they will gather and generate visual information and pose questions that arise from scientific looking. This will become the source material (images, processes and ideas)

DESCRIPTION:

{You are what you eat, but equally important is how you eat it and how you write about food and eating. The rich tradition of Chinese food and the even richer tradition of writing about food offer great food for thought. This course explores the major themes and topics related to food and the food culture of China as well as Chinese food in North America. Readings include two non-fiction books by Chinese American authors, namely, The Fortune Cookie Chronicles: Adventures in the World of Chinese Food by Jennifer Lee and Serve the People: A Stir-Fried Journey Through China by Jen Lin-Liu, as well as select fictional works by such Chinese authors as Wang Meng and Mo Yan. This course is reading-intensive. It is not a cooking class.

REGISTRATION PROCEDURES:

Beginning in mid-April 2019, incoming first-year (FY) students will fill out an academic interest survey, which allows students to share their top ten FYS preferences, as well as preferences for other courses with seats reserved for the FY pre-registration process. Beginning in early summer, FY students will

DESCRIPTION:

This seminar explores different types of broadcast and digital media, examining various cultural examples (e.g., music videos, television soap operas and reality shows, radio, and the Internet) and covering a variety of topics, including gender, sexuality, globalization, religion (personal and public), and activism. We will also discuss the ways traditional art forms (e.g., qawwali, ghazal, epic, classical dance) are transformed and given relevance in the modern South Asian media. An important theme of this course is how India and Pakistan, despite historical tensions, are linked by a common media culture that interprets and sometimes transcends geopolitical differences. This seminar will be particularly useful and fun for students who like to consider a variety of multimedia and textual sources in thinking about a provocative issue or question. Each student will design a short research project and make a presentation, and with a small group, produce a music video, giving the class an experiential perspective on the media in modern India and Pakistan. There are no prerequisites.

DESCRIPTION:

Taking the recent Korean Wave phenomenon as its point of departure, this course introduces students to the history of transnational imaginations in modern and contemporary Korean culture. Drawing upon literature, film, television, and secondary scholarship, we will explore how a diverse array of Korean cultural producers have used narratives of cross-border travel, migration, and exchange to rethink Korea's place in the world and refashion Korean identity. In each section of the course, we will consider a different domain or dimension of border-crossing activity: education; labor; migration and diaspora; North-South interactions; war and military; cosmopolitan imaginings and the making of 'global Korea.' In so doing, we will learn to think critically about the relationship between works from colonial Korea, postcolonial North Korea, postcolonial South Korea, and the Korean diaspora, and we will also gain a more nuanced understanding of popular culture's place within its broader social and historical contexts.

DESCRIPTION:

The focus of this first year seminar will be on organisms living within moving fluids. The natural world is replete with examples of animals and plants whose shape influences flow to their benefit. For example, the shape of a maple seed generates lift to allow for farther dispersal. The structure of a pinecone helps it to filter pollen from the air. A falcon's form during a dive reduces drag and allows it to reach greater speeds. In this course, students will develop semester long projects with the goal of understanding how organisms deal the air and water around them. In collaboration with the UNC Makerspace, we will mathematically describe the shape of organisms using photogrammetry, 3D scanning, and computer aided design (CAD). We will use the resulting 3D objects in numerical simulations of flow around organisms. We will also 3D print these objects and place them inside flow tanks for comparison to simulation. Please note that there are no prerequisites for this course, and all students are invited to join the class.

TITLE: The History of the Science of Life

GEN EDS: HS

DESCRIPTION:

This interdisciplinary seminar, co-taught by an evolutionary biologist (Kingsolver) and a humanities scholar who works on the history of the life sciences (Wolfe), examines central ideas and questions in the field of evolutionary biology from both contemporary and historical perspectives. We will learn how biological theories concerning mutation, adaptation and selection, extinction and the fossil record, genetic inheritance, altruism, and evolutionary design grow out of the diverse traditions of natural philosophy and natural history that reach back to Aristotle in ancient Greece, through the seventeenth-century advances and discoveries of Francis Bacon and the Royal Society, and to pioneers in evolutionary biology such as Charles Darwin. The course will introduce

BIOL 202H.001 | Molecular Biology and Genetics

MWF, 10:10 am - 11:00 am. Instructor(s): Steven Matson. Enrollment = 24.

The content of this course will be essentially the same as that of a regular section of Biology 202. We will discuss the structure and function of nucleic acids as well as the principles of inheritance, gene expression, genome organization and genetic engineering. There will be three class meetings per week with special emphasis on class discussion and an interactive classroom. You are expected to be actively engaged in this course through discussions, class activities and pre- as well as post-class assignments and readings. In addition to two mid-term exams and the final exam, there will be one significant writing assignment and at least one small group project during the semester. The required text for this course will be Essentials of Genetics (9th edition) by Klug et al. There is likely to be additional assigned reading from the primary literature. Students who have taken or are currently taking organic chemistry will be particularly well prepared for this course.

NOTE: WAIT LISTING FOR FALL 2019 HONORS COURSES HAS BEEN SUSPENDED. BEGINNING MONDAY, AUGUST 19, YOU MUST OBTAIN WRITTEN INSTRUCTOR PERMISSION FOR ANY HONORS COURSE YOU WISH TO JOIN. YOU ARE REQUIRED TO DELIVER A HARD-COPY OF THE PERMISSION NOTE TO THE HONORS CAROLINA OFFICE IN 225 GRAHAM MEMORIAL.

Students who take 395H meet for an hour and a half each week (in addition to the research that they do in their own labs) and work on research-related skills. We run workshops on literature search, you will discuss and analyze primary scientific literature, you will practice in scientific writing, and the icing on the cake- you will learn how to present your own research.

FOR BIOLOGY MAJORS ONLY. PREVIOUS ENROLLMENT IN BIOL 201 OR 202 REQUIRED. DEPARTMENT OF BIOLOGY PERMISSION REQUIRED; APPLICATION AVAILABLE IN 213 COKER HALL.
Application required - get application in 213 Coker Hall - due no later than the first day of classes

BIOL	409L	401	11635	PRINTMAKING AND BIOLOGY	Lab (Face to Face Instruction)	1	A
BIOL 409L.401   Merging Printmaking and Biology M, 11:00 am - 2:00 pm. Instructor(s): Bob Goldstein / Beth Grabowski. Enrollment = 14. ARTS409H and BIOL409L together will bring together art majors and science majors to learn theory and practical skills in both art and science, and to make use of this learning to make artworks using a variety of printmaking techniques. Units in this course are organized according to topics in biology. As students learn specific biological concepts and practical lab skills, they will gather and generate visual information and pose questions that arise from scientific looking. This will become the source material (images, processes and ideas) for printmaking projects.  In the print studio, the course will introduce specific technical approaches within three categories of printmaking: intaglio (photogravure), relief (large-scale wood cut and/or letterpress) and stencil printing (screen-printing). Students will learn how to make printing matrices (plate, block or screen), how to print these matrices and explore the affordances of these technical skills (print strategies) as unique approaches to art-making.

Pre-req = BIOL 205 Meets in GS 2101 Advanced undergrads can take this course, but permission of the instructor is required. Please email Dr Shiau (shiauce@bio.unc.edu) with your PID number and why you want to take this course. Course topic: Exploring Gut, Brain, and Immunity. Have you ever wondered if there was a scientific basis for a gut feeling or butterflies in one's stomach? We will be exploring topics that relate to how brain and the gut communicate with one another. These will also relate the brain-gut axis to the immune system and the microbiota. The course will allow students to survey these exciting topics and critically think, critique, and understand the experimental evidence for what we understand today about the gut and the brain relationship.

The class will meet once a week for 2 hrs (thus, register for 2 credit hrs) at a time and place to be determined. The instructor will poll students to find the best meeting time.
Permission of the instructor required. Please email Dr White with your PID number, why you are interested in this course and to participate in the scheduling poll: peter.white@unc.edu.
This class is a collaboration with the University's North Carolina Botanical Garden and has two main goals: to examine the state of plant conservation science and to discuss the changing role of botanical gardens given the challenges of climate change, environmental sustainability, and threats to biodiversity. Students will also be exposed to research and career opportunities in the world of conservation and public gardens. Weekly topics will include seed and germplasm banks, reintroduction of species to the wild, using climate change forecasts to determine appropriate genetic material, assisted migration, invasive species, natural area restoration, conservation management, regional conservation planning, gardening to support pollinator populations and wildlife, the UNC Herbarium as a center of biodiversity research and information, educational programs, citizen science, gardening in the context of water use, fertilizers, pesticides, and other issues of sustainable environmental practices.

DESCRIPTION:

The underlying theme of this seminar is the development of the basic tools for extracting information from, or finding flaws in, news reports and popular science writing. Working in groups, students will examine the global energy problem, including its impact on the economy and relationship to the environment. Students will evaluate the potential for alternative energy sources, such as solar energy and biomass fuels, to meet future needs and deliberate on the roles that scientists, government, and private industry will need to play in order to achieve a solution to this complicated but critical problem. The seminar will include reading and short writing assignments, student-led discussions and debates, and a final project presentation.

REGISTRATION PROCEDURES:

Beginning in mid-April 2019, incoming first-year (FY) students will fill out an academic interest survey, which allows students to share their top ten FYS preferences, as well as preferences for other courses with seats reserved for the FY pre-registration process. Beginning in early summer, FY students will

Use Waitlists on Connect Carolina until the registration period is complete.

· Only waitlist one section! (If you add to the waitlist for multiple sections, the registration system will see a conflict (enrolling in the same course twice) and you will not be enrolled if a seat becomes available. The person behind you on the waitlist will claim the seat.

· Check to see if other sections at the same day and time have a waitlist. Some sections have no waitlist, while others are 4 deep. If there is another section at the day and time you need, it is better to be first on the waitlist.

· Be persistent, seats do open up.

If you are not enrolled in a lab section by the first week of classes: The chemistry undergraduate lab courses use an electronic waitlist to fill any empty seats that open during the week of check-in

- Check to see if other sections at the same day and time have a waitlist. Some sections have no waitlist, while others are 4 deep. If there is another section at the day and time you need, it is better to be first on the waitlist.

- Be persistent, seats do open up.

If you are not enrolled in a lab section by the first week of classes: The chemistry undergraduate lab courses use an electronic waitlist to fill any empty seats that open during the week of check-in

Use Waitlists on Connect Carolina until the registration period is complete.

· Only waitlist one section! (If you add to the waitlist for multiple sections, the registration system will see a conflict (enrolling in the same course twice) and you will not be enrolled if a seat becomes available. The person behind you on the waitlist will claim the seat.

· Check to see if other sections at the same day and time have a waitlist. Some sections have no waitlist, while others are 4 deep. If there is another section at the day and time you need, it is better to be first on the waitlist.

· Be persistent, seats do open up.

If you are not enrolled in a lab section by the first week of classes: The chemistry undergraduate lab courses use an electronic waitlist to fill any empty seats that open during the week of check-in

CHEM 102H.001 | Advanced General Descriptive Chemistry

TR, 2:00 pm - 3:15 pm. Instructor(s): Carribeth Bliem. Enrollment = 35.

CHEM 102H is recommended by the Chemistry Department for incoming first year students who have taken Advanced Placement Chemistry or the equivalent and plan to major in chemistry and/or plan a career as a research scientist. CHEM 102H focuses on a more in-depth treatment of topics traditionally covered in two semesters of freshman courses. The topics covered have been identified by the Department of Chemistry faculty as essential for success in and a good foundation for more advanced study in chemistry and other areas of the basic and applied sciences. The textbook, lectures and course work require a willingness to accept rigorous academic challenges and a solid high school background in algebra, coordinate geometry, and trigonometry. Differential and integral calculus will be used only where necessary in derivations and with explanation.

STUDENTS ELIGIBLE FOR ENROLLMENT IN CHEM 102H ARE INCOMING FIRST YEAR STUDENTS WHO HAVE RECEIVED AN ADVANCED PLACEMENT SCORE OF 5 AND HAVE BEEN GRANTED CHEM 102H.001 | Advanced General Descriptive Chemistry

Use Waitlists on Connect Carolina until the registration period is complete.

- Only waitlist one section! (If you add to the waitlist for multiple sections, the registration system will see a conflict (enrolling in the same course twice) and you will not be enrolled if a seat becomes available. The person behind you on the waitlist will claim the seat.

- Check to see if other sections at the same day and time have a waitlist. Some sections have no waitlist, while others are 4 deep. If there is another section at the day and time you need, it is better to be first on the waitlist.
- Be persistent, seats do open up.

If you are not enrolled in a lab section by the first week of classes: The chemistry undergraduate lab courses use an electronic waitlist to fill any empty seats that open during the week of check-in

Use Waitlists on Connect Carolina until the registration period is complete.

. Only waitlist one section! (If you add to the waitlist for multiple sections, the registration system will see a conflict (enrolling in the same course twice) and you will not be enrolled if a seat becomes available. The person behind you on the waitlist will claim the seat.

. Check to see if other sections at the same day and time have a waitlist. Some sections have no waitlist, while others are 4 deep. If there is another section at the day and time you need, it is better to be first on the waitlist.

. Be persistent, seats do open up.

If you are not enrolled in a lab section by the first week of classes: The chemistry undergraduate lab courses use an electronic waitlist to fill any empty seats that open during the week of check-in

Use Waitlists on Connect Carolina until the registration period is complete.

· Only waitlist one section! (If you add to the waitlist for multiple sections, the registration system will see a conflict (enrolling in the same course twice) and you will not be enrolled if a seat becomes available. The person behind you on the waitlist will claim the seat.

· Check to see if other sections at the same day and time have a waitlist. Some sections have no waitlist, while others are 4 deep. If there is another section at the day and time you need, it is better to be first on the waitlist.

· Be persistent, seats do open up.

If you are not enrolled in a lab section by the first week of classes: The chemistry undergraduate lab courses use an electronic waitlist to fill any empty seats that open during the week of check-in

CHEM 245L.401 | Honors Laboratory in Separations and Analytical Characterization of Organic and Biological Compounds

M, 1:25 pm - 4:15 pm. Instructor(s): Leslie Hicks. Enrollment = 16.

In the honors analytical methods lab students will use chromatographic, spectroscopic, and electrochemical methods to carry out a real world analysis. Students will work with real world samples throughout the semester and the lab course will emphasize group work. A portion of the lab will involve a group research project. Groups will be given a problem to solve and the time to design their own experiments, run their experiments, collect data, and give a poster presentation on their group research project. What is great about the group research is that each group decides on their own direction, what techniques they wish to use, and need to use, to solve a particular analysis problem.

PREREQUISITE: CHEM 101/101L AND 102/102L.

PRE/COREQUISITE: CHEM 241H.

CHEM 261H.001 | Honors Organic Chemistry I

TR, 9:30 am - 10:45 am. Instructor(s): Marcey Waters. Enrollment = 25.

Molecular structure and its determination by modern physical methods, correlation between structure and reactivity and the theoretical basis for these relationships; classification of "reaction types" exhibited by organic molecules using as examples molecules of biological importance. This course will be similar to CHEM 261 with a greater emphasis on class discussion and some use of computer modeling techniques.

PREREQUISITES: CHEM 102 OR CHEM 102H. GPA OF 3.600 OR HIGHER.

DEPARTMENT OF CHEMISTRY CONSENT REQUIRED. EMAIL chemus@unc.edu.

Professor Waters's research interests are at the interface of organic chemistry and biochemistry. The overarching goal of her research is to design

Use Waitlists on Connect Carolina until the registration period is complete.

· Only waitlist one section! (If you add to the waitlist for multiple sections, the registration system will see a conflict (enrolling in the same course twice) and you will not be enrolled if a seat becomes available. The person behind you on the waitlist will claim the seat.

· Check to see if other sections at the same day and time have a waitlist. Some sections have no waitlist, while others are 4 deep. If there is another section at the day and time you need, it is better to be first on the waitlist.

· Be persistent, seats do open up.

If you are not enrolled in a lab section by the first week of classes: The chemistry undergraduate lab courses use an electronic waitlist to fill any empty seats that open during the week of check-in

CHEM 430H.001 | Introduction to Biological Chemistry

TR, 12:30 pm - 1:45 pm. Instructor(s): Brian Hogan. Enrollment = 30.

Dynamic examination of the principles of biochemistry, from macromolecules through enzyme function and catalysis, and into the primary metabolic pathways that generate cellular energy. This course will be an interactive combination of lecture, group based guided inquiry along with presentations from students and deeper dives into topics of mutual interest to course participants. The goal of the course is to provide a detailed foundation in biochemistry and to teach critical thinking skills focused on understanding and challenging primary biochemical data. Students who enroll in this course are typically heading to graduate or professional school in this area of study, or will use the principles employed to enhance their problem-solving abilities.

Chemistry 430H is designed for chemistry majors and is not cross-listed with biol 430. Hence, Chemistry majors in the honors program will have priority.

Seats will open as follows: Chemistry majors in honors with senior status,

Chemistry majors in honors with junior status, Chemistry majors BS-Biochem, Chemistry majors BA. Any additional seats (and there usually are very limited

MWF, 11:15 am - 12:05 pm. Instructor(s): Jennifer Gates-Foster. Enrollment = 24.

Who Owns the Past?

Archaeology is all about the past, but it is embedded in the politics and realities of the present day. This course will introduce you to the ethical, moral and political dimensions of archaeological sites and artifacts, especially in situations where the meaning and stewardship of ancient artifacts is under dispute. This course develops your awareness both of the nature of archaeological evidence, but also (and perhaps more importantly) stimulates you to think about the role played by modern interests in how that evidence is preserved, presented and interpreted. You will be required to articulate your own ethical positions on these issues while working to understand the legal and moral codes in place in society to guide the treatment of these important resources.

DESCRIPTION:

Taking a participatory approach to ancient Greek drama, this course pairs readings of three Athenian playwrights (Aeschylus, Euripides, and Aristophanes) with performance-oriented activities, readings, and writings. At its most traditional, this course surveys the much-discussed and much-theorized historio-cultural context of ¿classical¿ Athens, with particular focus on the political, religious, and aesthetic forces that gave rise to humankind¿s first recorded theater.

More innovatively, this course probes the dual nature of theater¿that is, its distinct but intertwined existences as script and performance¿through

CLAS 131H.001 | Classical Mythology

MWF, 11:15 am - 12:05 pm; Recitation: W, 3:35 pm - 4:25 pm. Instructor(s): James Rives. Enrollment = 24.

The purpose of this course is to introduce students to the myths of the ancient Greeks and Romans, the stories about gods, goddesses, and heroes that were told and retold over a period of centuries. The emphasis will be not simply on learning these stories, but on studying them in their historical context. How were they transmitted? What roles did they play in Greek and Roman culture? What can we learn from them about the way that the ancient Greeks and Romans understood the world around them? In our explorations we will concentrate on literary texts, especially epic and tragedy, but will also consider visual sources, especially vase painting and sculpture. As another way of exploring the significance of myth in ancient Greek and Roman society, we will also examine analogous phenomena in our own society.

I received my BA from Washington University in St. Louis in 1984 and my PhD from Stanford University in 1990. After teaching at Columbia University in New

CLAS 240H.001 | Women in Greek Art and Literature

TR, 3:30 pm - 4:45 pm; Recitation: W, 3:35 pm - 4:25 pm. Instructor(s): Sharon James. Enrollment = 14.

In this class, we will learn about the life of women in ancient Greece, beginning with this question: what do we mean when we say ¿women in ancient Greece¿? Since Greek cultural values and class structures make the category ¿woman¿ very complex, it will take us all semester to answer this question. We will focus on the treatment, both legal and social, of women in antiquity, by examining the visual depictions of women and women¿s lives as well as the literary evidence. We will also look at the gap between ideology and reality, asking "did Greek men really hate women?" We will cover about 900 years of history in this course.

Throughout the term we will study theories, laws, and social practices applying to women, looking particularly at: concepts of woman; differing gender ideologies for women in the different regions of Greece (Sparta, Gortyn, Athens) and in different social classes; occupations for women; the involvement of

DESCRIPTION:

What if Black pirates raided European slave ships to liberate enslaved Africans? What if African Americans could time travel? What if the most powerful being the world has ever seen were a Black female vampire or telepath? Those ¿what ifs¿ fit within a genre called Black speculative fiction. Focused on speculative fiction, fantasy, and science fiction written by Black Diaspora authors, this semester challenges students to think critically and creatively about modern structures of race and racism. Using historical and theoretical readings to guide us, we travel to the worlds these authors create, seek to understand the workings of race there, and return to our contemporary contexts to reflect and critique what we have witnessed. How do understandings of race and racism in these worlds help us engage with structures of race and racism in ours? What racial logics motivate the main characters and the sociopolitical movements of which they are apart? What is the relationship between Blackness there and Blackness here?

¿Performance¿ will serve as a process¿oriented, participatory, and experiential way to interpret, analyze, and re-present course materials. This includes

DESCRIPTION:

The globalization of food systems is both a hotly contested subject and a central part of contemporary life. This course provides an applied introduction to key debates by adopting a critical organizational communication lens on our globalized food system. Drawing on readings, popular media texts, discussions, and experiential activities, we will explore food system labor practices, the role of multinational companies and global commodity chains, the status of hunger and food deserts, the role of food marketing and consumption practices, and the growth of local and sustainable movements devoted to food justice. Throughout, we investigate how our global food system is shaped by different types of organizations operating within particular locales, such as North Carolina, USA.

This is an APPLES-designated service-learning course that requires service hours. In addition to experiential field activities and visits, our course is organized around group-based engaged research projects. Your success will depend upon your ability to work independently and practice collective leadership.

INFORMATION ABOUT THE CLASS:

To learn more about this class, see Fall 2019 FYS Online Brochure: <http://fys.unc.edu/courses/fall-2019-first-year-seminars/>

REGISTRATION PROCEDURES:

Beginning in mid-April 2019, incoming first-year (FY) students will fill out an academic interest survey, which allows students to share their top ten FYS preferences, as well as preferences for other courses with seats reserved for the FY pre-registration process. Beginning in early summer, FY students will be pre-registered in two fall 2019 classes based on their interest survey responses and availability of seats. In July 2019, FY students will then have the opportunity to self-enroll in the remaining FYS seats during their assigned course registration dates. On Wednesday, July 31, one day after the last FY student course registration date has closed, FY open registration begins (all incoming FY students can register or make adjustments to their fall 2019 class schedules in ConnectCarolina).

Course Topic: Writing the Dramatic Podcast

Course Description: Students learn how to go from an idea to a serialized dramatic podcast. Creating an original series of their own, students explore ways writers develop cliff hangers, tension, conflict and suspense within an episode and how writers sustain it throughout the development of a series.

Course descriptions:

This course will provide an introduction to the history and development of "Theory" as the foundation for much of the most interesting thinking and research in the humanities and social sciences. In the contemporary intellectual universe, "theory" provides a common language of concepts and methods that enable intellectuals and scholars investigating human social and everyday life to speak to one another-- across disciplines and geographies, comparable to the way statistics and experimentation function in the more traditional models of science (including some social science work).

"Theory" includes many of the major schools of modern and contemporary philosophy (that stand in opposition to what is often referred to as "analytic philosophy, " which often dominates Anglo-American philosophy departments); but it also includes other-- less traditionally "philosophical"--positions. At the same time, "theory" differs from "philosophy" in so far as it is interested in providing the foundation for more empirically oriented understandings of concrete instances of human relations, practices, etc. What philosophy and theory have in common is that they provide a set of tools--concepts, filters,

The overarching objective of COMM 702 is to introduce graduate teaching assistants to the practice and theory of teaching undergraduate students at UNC. The course will provide practical advice and tips about teaching. The beginning and middle of the course will focus on practical elements of teaching, such as people management (ie. navigating classroom relationships, classroom climate, and disruptive students), classroom management (ie. fostering class discussion, classroom activities, and lectures), and document management (ie. preparing syllabus, choosing reading assignments and grading). The final few weeks of the course encourages contemplation about the theory of teaching and the role of the professoriate in academe. Course content and class discussions are designed to encourage intellectually rigorous and personally meaningful conversations about our teaching and how our personal perspectives of teaching and learning influence our practices as teachers. We will read about and discuss different approaches to teaching, the enactment of communication instruction, and growing as a teacher. You will leave this course with materials designed to help you as a new teacher, such as a course syllabus, a lesson plan, and a draft of your statement of teaching philosophy.

DESCRIPTION:

Light has figured centrally in human explanations and manipulations of the natural world: from creation narratives, to the Copernican Revolution, to the theory of relativity, to harvesting energy from sunlight, to shaping light inside phones and screens for the capture and display of images. The goal of this course is to bring students into an intellectual encounter with light, one that will provide a history of human understandings of light, experimental encounters with light in the laboratory, and orientations to theoretical paradigms that have resulted from the human manipulation of light. At its most broad, the course aims to introduce first year students to knowledge and matter-energy as things that we study, handle, and transform.

COMP 089H.001 | Human and Artificial Intelligence Through the Prism of Language

TR, 11:00 am - 12:15 pm. Instructor(s): Katya Pertsova / Mohit Bansal. Enrollment = 12.

The development of AI on the one hand is motivated by solving concrete practical problems. On the other hand, AI has important implications for our understanding of humanity and human intelligence, as well as the nature of knowledge and meaning. Because language is at the center of human ability to reason, communicate, and encode knowledge, many current advances in AI are focused on linguistic technologies -- after all, we hope to be able to communicate and interact with the intelligence that we create. Thus, understanding how language works, how it is shaped by facts of human cognition as well as social interaction is important for developing human-friendly AI. At the same time, machine learning tools used in AI can also be useful in the scientific study of language, for example for testing hypotheses about laws that govern human language acquisition, language change, and language use. The goal of this course is to expose students, not necessarily familiar with either of the two disciplines, to these two complementary and mutually beneficial approaches. Students will get a basic understanding of the progress that has been made in linguistics and computer science at modeling language in the

DESCRIPTION:

The goal of this seminar is to get you doing theatre, to spark your creativity and to connect you with the deeper lessons of this dynamic art form. You will act. You will write. You will work with others. It will not always be easy, but if you are willing to stretch yourself, you should have a great time. Each lesson is organized around a principle or virtue inherent in the practice of the art. Participants study a quotation or two that relate to that principle and then engage in drama exercises that spring from that principle. By the end of the course, you will have gained skills to make you comfortable to write, stage and perform your own 10 minute plays. Not just for those interested in pursuing theatre, this seminar will give you a more holistic understanding of essential principles in the practice of your life.

REGISTRATION PROCEDURES:

Beginning in mid-April 2019, incoming first-year (FY) students will fill out an academic interest survey, which allows students to share their top ten FYS

DRAM 081H.001 | Staging America: The American Drama

TR, 2:00 pm - 3:15 pm. Instructor(s): Greg Kable. Enrollment = 24.

This seminar examines our national drama from its colonial origins to the present. Participants read plays and criticism, screen videos, engage in critical writing, and consider performance as related means of exploring the visions and revisions constituting American dramatic history. We will approach American drama as both a literary and commercial art form, and look to its history to provide a context for current American theater practice. Readings are chosen for their intrinsic merit and historical importance, but also for their treatment of key issues and events in American life. Our focus throughout will be on the forces that shaped the American drama as well as, in turn, that drama's ability to shed light on the national experience.

FIRST YEAR STUDENTS ONLY.

NOTE: WAIT LISTING FOR FALL 2019 HONORS COURSES HAS BEEN SUSPENDED. BEGINNING MONDAY, AUGUST 19, YOU MUST OBTAIN WRITTEN INSTRUCTOR PERMISSION FOR ANY HONORS COURSE YOU WISH TO JOIN. YOU ARE REQUIRED TO DELIVER A HARD-COPY OF THE PERMISSION NOTE TO THE HONORS CAROLINA OFFICE IN 225 GRAHAM MEMORIAL.

DESCRIPTION:

This seminar will explore the artists, art and technology involved in creating the world of the play. It is intended as an overview for students who want to learn about theatrical design. Students will create their own designs in the areas of scenery, costumes, and lighting for three plays throughout the semester. The plays will be placed outside of their traditional setting while still maintaining the story and themes. Students have placed Shakespeare's A Midsummer Night's Dream in a trailer park and a daycare center for example. Careful historical research, close reading and analysis, text and source material, and collaboration will be the focus of the student projects.

REGISTRATION PROCEDURES:

Beginning in mid-April 2019, incoming first-year (FY) students will fill out an academic interest survey, which allows students to share their top ten FYS preferences, as well as preferences for other courses with seats reserved for the FY pre-registration process. Acting the Song: This class will examine the unique challenge facing the music theatre actor. Making full use of both acting and music performance techniques, students will develop greater facility in truthful and engaging storytelling within scenes and songs in the American Musical Theatre canon. Topics covered will include breathing and vocal production, scene-to-song, solos and duets, and playing your own instrument. All musical material is fair play, from Brigadoon to Hamilton and everything in between, so students get a chance to tackle their dream role or favorite song!

DESCRIPTION:

This seminar takes as its primary object of analysis the emerging genre of graphic literature. Relying on visual texts, we will examine how meaning is made through the juxtaposition and framing of images as well as the relationship between words and images. In addition to focusing on the development of visual literacy skills, this course also explores the global issues that are the subjects of these texts. In the process of comparing images, visual patterns emerge that enable the reader to identify artistic techniques and strategies that attempt to convey meaning where words might fail. We will work to sharpen our critical thinking (and reading) skills and reflect on how seeing is a socially and culturally circumscribed phenomenon. For example, are we trained by our societies not only to see some things and not others but also to attach certain meanings to what we see? If so, is it possible that this phenomenon shapes who we are? As we attempt to answer these and other questions, we will learn about the nature of the visual in these narratives and in our own lives. Creating a graphic narrative will be one of the projects we undertake.

Comparative Literature 120: Epic and Lyric Traditions This course provides an introductory survey of epic and lyric poetry in Europe from Homer's Iliad and Odyssey through John Milton's Paradise Lost, by way of Lucretius (On the Nature of Things), Virgil (Georgics and Aeneid), Ovid (Metamorphoses, Amores, and Tristia), Petrarch (Canzoniere), Dante (Inferno), and Tasso (Jerusalem Liberated). Students will study the formal qualities of these works -- with what rhetorical and narrative strategies and conventions are they assembled? -- as well as the historical and intellectual contexts in which they were produced, and in the process will learn how literary traditions form, and transform, across space and time. A reading-intensive class with two short (3pp) and two longer (6-7pp) writing assignments plus a comprehensive final examination. A mixture of dynamic lecturing and weekly discussion sections.

In this course, we will consider Daniel Defoe's Robinson Crusoe (1719) together with other works on island castaways. We will start with literary texts that influenced the novel, such as William Shakespeare's The Tempest (1623), and end with films that continue the tradition, such as Robinson Crusoe on Mars (1964) and Castaway (2000).

CMPL 250H.001 | Approaches to Comparative Literature

TR, 9:30 am - 10:45 am. Instructor(s): Inger Brodey. Enrollment = 24.

This course introduces students to central methods and issues in the comparative study of literature. Rather than develop any one single approach, the hope is that students will gain an appreciation of the rich literary opportunities available within the discipline, and master many of the tools necessary for the comparative study of literature. With the help of a Graduate Research Consultant (GRC), students will have the opportunity to develop a topic from the class into a Comparative Literature research project, using methods appropriate to the discipline.

Part One will introduce students to various forms of literary theory, using contemporary theoretical approaches and short works of poetry and fiction. Part Two will explore issues in cross-cultural interpretation and inter-textuality, including the problems of translation across languages and culture, as well as transformation between verbal and visual media. It will include writings on Japanese aesthetics to contrast with readings in Part One. In this section we will also learn research techniques that are specific to the field of Comparative Literature.

NOTE: WAIT LISTING FOR FALL 2019 HONORS COURSES HAS BEEN SUSPENDED. BEGINNING MONDAY, AUGUST 19, YOU MUST OBTAIN WRITTEN INSTRUCTOR PERMISSION FOR ANY HONORS COURSE YOU WISH TO JOIN. YOU ARE REQUIRED TO DELIVER A HARD-COPY OF THE PERMISSION NOTE TO THE HONORS CAROLINA OFFICE IN 225 GRAHAM MEMORIAL.

CMPL 251 familiarizes students with the theory and practice of comparative literature as it introduces students to the broader practices and methods of literary theory. Against a critical examination of classical poetics and rhetoric, CMPL 251 explores various modern literary theories and discourses, including Russian formalism, the Frankfurt School, feminism, psychoanalysis, the Black Arts Movement, deconstruction, new historicism, the critical philosophy of race, and more. This course takes an historical approach to literary theory, with a focus on the questions that define the field of aesthetics: What is a work of art? What social functions does it fulfill? What are the sources of an artwork and how does it influence its audiences? How does the literary work of art intersect with discourses and acts of social and political power? As we work to respond eloquently to these questions, we will closely read works by Plato, Aristotle, Kant, Marx, Freud, Du Bois, Foucault, Derrida, Hortense Spillers, Judith Butler, and Fred Moten, among others. Students will participate in regular class discussions of ideas and movements, write multiple brief response papers demonstrating their grasp of the subject matter, and sit for midterm and final examinations.

"This course will focus on the paradoxical relationship of minorities to the horror film genre in various global and political contexts. Why does a genre accused of excluding diversity continues to be primarily embraced by African-American, Latinx and LGBTQ audiences? To tackle this question, the course will examine representations of political otherness in classic horror cinema alongside recent global films that transform the genre's gender and racial stereotypes into narratives that advocate for the underrepresented, the oppressed and the marginalized. To this end, students will produce film projects showcasing their ideas on how minorities could be/should be represented in the genre. Films will likely include: Candyman, Get Out, Us, Pan's Labyrinth, Mama, The Curse of La Llorona, The Headless Woman, Psycho, The Silence of the Lambs, A Nightmare on Elm Street 2, The Babadook, CachÃ©, High Tension, Diabolique and The Purge. NOTE: some of the films we will examine necessarily feature disturbing scenes; please enroll only if you plan to engage such representations in a serious critical manner. This course satisfies the Visual & Performing Arts (VP) and Global Issues (GL) requirements. It also counts for the Global Cinema minor, and the Film Studies concentration within the English major.

Works include Rousseau's Confessions, Goethe's Sorrows of Young Werther, and Wordsworth's Prelude; the lyric poetry of Whitman, MartÃ-, and Neruda; manifestos, critical essays, and modern studies of Romantic periods and modes.

We will also be tracing contemporaneous developments in the visual arts and following some common interdisciplinary threads that have been of particular

We'll study a selection of Spanish American essays and short stories, as well as longer narratives, comparing them to international works. We'll focus on masterpieces from the late 19th and 20th centuries, in addition to important non-canonical and digital texts from the 21st. We'll also explore the evolution of these genres, while probing why the definition of ¿genre¿ is problematic. Using a variety of perspectives and types of texts, we'll examine relevant theory and practice. We'll do this in conjunction with major international trends and writers in order to better understand innovation and the cross-pollination of ideas that affected the texts and their development not only within, but also without Latin America. Topics for discussion will include (yet not be limited to) the following: evolving notions of authors, readers, and genres; the Other; gender; cultural studies.

Required Texts (Selections): (1) For Spanish specialists, Seymour Menton, ed., El cuento hispanoamericano: antología crítico-histórica (11th ed., 2013); John Skirrius, ed., El ensayo hispanoamericano del siglo XX (5th ed., 2006); Borges, Ficciones; Borges, Otras inquisiciones; Cortázar, La autopista del sur y otros cuentos; Valenzuela, The Censors (bilingual ed.). (2) For those who read in translation, Roberto González Echevarría, ed., The Oxford Book of Latin

DESCRIPTION:

William Blake, the visionary poet, artist and printmaker of the British Romantic period, has had enormous influence on modern art and popular culture. His illuminated poetry integrated word and image anticipating graphic novels and influencing many modern musicians, poets, writers (including Pullman, His Dark Materials Trilogy, Bono, Patti Smith and Jim Morrison). Using the Blake Archive, a hypertext of Blake's poetry and art, we will study key Blake works as well as the digital medium that enables us to study these works in new ways. We will also explore the Web for performances and adaptations of the works we study and for works by musicians, painters, poets, writers, actors, playwrights, performers, dancers and film and video makers who were or are inspired or influenced by Blake. Students will share their discoveries with the class and produce critical or creative responses to a work by Blake or by an influenced artist.

DESCRIPTION:

In this class, we will look at the ways writing is evolving as it moves into digital spaces, with a particular focus on how to create an online presence to represent one's identity and interests. We will learn aspects of web development, how to participate in and develop a social media presence, and how to use multimedia to create messages. These contemporary tasks will be considered in light of historical concerns related to writing and communication. The class will also focus on creativity and the ways in which digital modes of communicating can open spaces for broader participation in the arts and creative expression.

REGISTRATION PROCEDURES:

Beginning in mid-April 2019, incoming first-year (FY) students will fill out an academic interest survey, which allows students to share their top ten FYS preferences, as well as preferences for other courses with seats reserved for the FY pre-registration process. Beginning in early summer, FY students will

Mark-up, coding, metadata, data visualization; these technological words may seem completely unrelated to fields of study such as Literature, Philosophy, History, and Art, but they actually play a key role in shaping culture, society, and human thought today; issues at the heart of the Humanities. As a result, a new interdisciplinary area of study, known as Digital Humanities (DH), has emerged to explore the role of technology in society and use new digital methods to analyze traditional materials in the Humanities, such as texts, objects, and archives. In English 105I: Writing in the Digital Humanities, we will explore this new area of study by closely looking at its tools and methodology to learn the types of composition and writing that result from these shifts in humanistic inquiry. Students may not receive credit for both ENGL 105 and ENGL 102, 102I, or 105I.

ENGL 120H.001 | Introduction to British Literature: 650-1750 CE

TR, 2:00 pm - 3:15 pm. Instructor(s): Helen Cushman. Enrollment = 24.

This course is an introduction to, and an overview of, British literature, from the oldest known poem in English (c. 680) to the mid-18th century. We will sample some texts from each of the periods (Old English, Middle English, Renaissance, Seventeenth Century, Eighteenth Century), and study several genres (elegy, satire, narrative verse, love songs and sonnets, drama, epic, and some prose). The first three volumes (A, B, and C) of the Norton Anthology of English Literature, 10th Edition will be the only required texts.

NOTE: WAIT LISTING FOR FALL 2019 HONORS COURSES HAS BEEN SUSPENDED. BEGINNING MONDAY, AUGUST 19, YOU MUST OBTAIN WRITTEN INSTRUCTOR PERMISSION FOR ANY HONORS COURSE YOU WISH TO JOIN. YOU ARE REQUIRED TO DELIVER A HARD-COPY OF THE PERMISSION NOTE TO THE HONORS CAROLINA OFFICE IN 225 GRAHAM MEMORIAL.

ENGL 122H.001 | Introduction to American Literature

MWF, 10:10 am - 11:00 am. Instructor(s): Henry Veggian. Enrollment = 24.

This course surveys the literature of North America from its colonization by early Europeans through the middle of the nineteenth century. Students will read works of literature ranging from poetry and fiction to religious writings, varied non-fiction narratives and political writings of the era. In doing so, central terms and methods of literary history and scholarship will be central to the class. The latter will include the history of the book and interdisciplinary analyses of early American cultural development, while the former will include aesthetic terms and the histories and definitions of literary genres. The course meetings will alternate between lectures and discussion, with discussion constituting the slight majority of class time; we will also use digital media to access and discuss archival, digital, and copyright free materials as well as generate inquiry on the class discussion board (Sakai). The course will conclude with a project that students will compose and present to the class.

ENGL 132H.001 | Honors: Intro to Fiction Writing

TR, 11:00 am - 12:15 pm. Instructor(s): Randall Kenan. Enrollment = 15.

This course is a collective, collaborative exploration of the processes and techniques of fiction, through close observation and discussion of about three dozen stories, and the writing of eight to ten short exercises dealing with the elements of fiction (setting, characterization, dialogue, point of view, etc.) and, later in the term, one short story (2,000-5,000 words). There is a midterm examination and a critical paper. The class is a seminar, a workshop with both written and oral critiques of student works required, and students can expect an atmosphere that is lively and encouraging as we investigate the imaginative craft of fiction.

FIRST YEAR HONORS CAROLINA STUDENTS ONLY.

NOTE: WAIT LISTING FOR FALL 2019 HONORS COURSES HAS BEEN SUSPENDED. BEGINNING MONDAY, AUGUST 19, YOU MUST OBTAIN WRITTEN INSTRUCTOR PERMISSION FOR ANY HONORS COURSE YOU WISH TO JOIN. ENGL 133H.001 | Honors: Intro to Poetry Writing

MW, 3:35 pm - 4:40 pm. Instructor(s): Gabby Calvocoressi. Enrollment = 15.

In this class we'll be thinking about every aspect of the poem. What inspires us to write them, how do we start? And, most importantly, how can a deep understanding of poetic craft help us to make rigorous and muscular poems from the raw material of our lives and vision? We will look at the work of established poets to help us increase the power of our own. We will think about traditional forms as an invitation to our own urgent, necessary and deeply contemporary work. More than anything poetry is a conversation that's been happening over millennia. We will endeavor to find where we fit in and where and how we are blazing our own path. This is an Honors class so students will be expected to be actively engaged in their own work and the work of their peers. As such, each student will be paired with another member of the class as a Primary Reader. Primary Readers will write letters to each other throughout the term as means of thinking about how we talk (even at the beginning of our poetic lives) about the arc of another writer's poems and poetic pursuits.

Why are hip hop music and street literature currently the two most dominant forms of popular culture in our society? Should we celebrate the rise of African American artists and authors? Or should we condemn the massive popularity of both as another episode of cultural appropriation in our society's long history of exploitation? This course explores these questions and more by focusing on the history and evolution of these forms of black popular culture. We will trace the development of black pulp fiction from the crime fiction of Chester Himes, to the pimp fiction of Iceberg Slim, to the street fiction of Vickie Stringer. We will also consider how this literary genre would give rise to hip hop music and culture in the 1980s.

Note: Please be advised that the reading and listening materials for this course contain strong language, explicit sexuality, and gratuitous violence. Our

Do you like scary movies? Then, this is the course for you. Exploring the visceral interplay between terror and horror at the heart of the genre, ENGL 148 focuses on horror fiction from its origins in the Gothic novel to the contemporary work of Stephen King alongside film examples that range from Alfred Hitchcock's Rebecca to Stanley Kubrick's The Shining. Readings will include Frankenstein, Dracula, The Haunting of Hill House and shorter works by Edgar Allan Poe, HP Lovecraft, Richard Matheson, and Mark Z. Danielewski. To enrich our discussion of the literature, we will also watch classic horror films such as Halloween, Alien, The Exorcist, Night of the Living Dead and A Nightmare on Elm Street.

ENGLISH/FOLK/ANTHRO 202

Course Description:

This course introduces students to the principles and practices of folklore through the veritable treasure trove of Scottish Gaelic cultural heritage. Through ethnographic documentary evidence from twentieth- and twenty-first century fieldwork carried out on both sides of the Atlantic our focus here is given to traditions orally and aurally expressed and transmitted at the hearthside of the taigh céilidh (visiting-house) over multiple generations. From the shores of Scotland's Highlands and Hebrides and Canada's Maritime Provinces to the sand hills of North Carolina's Cape Fear River students will trace the survival, adaptation, demise and revival of various forms of shared knowledge among Gaels at home and in the diaspora. Topics will include but are not limited to the human landscape, place and personal names, supernatural belief, ritual year, songs, folktales, as well as music and dance, each functioning as driving forces in the communication of collective identity and forging social bonds. Through such rooted experience within this internationally

This course will examine canonical and non-canonical American novels written in various “popular” genres. Our survey will range from hardboiled detective fiction, fantasy, and dystopian sci-fi to racial passing narratives, immigration stories, graphic novels, and more. In addition to exploring the historical contexts and defining characteristics of these genres, we also will consider the ways in which race, gender, class, and sexuality inform both past and present conceptions of the “popular.”

ENGL 221H.001 | The Night Optics of 20th & 21st Century U.S. Novels
MWF, 10:10 am - 11:00 am. Instructor(s): María DeGuzmán. Enrollment = 24.
This course examines major U.S. novels and their night optics. These novels of the night perform a deep questioning of the ¿American Dream¿ and the novelistic task of giving form to chaos and refiguring the social order. This course examines the intertwining legacies of the dark side of the Enlightenment, Gothicism, Romanticism, noir, existentialism, Gnosticism, and socio-political and aesthetic dissent. Required reading: F. Scott Fitzgerald¿s Tender is the Night (1934); Djuna Barnes¿s Nightwood (1936); William Styron¿s Lie Down in Darkness (1951), Ralph Ellison¿s Invisible Man (1952), John Rechy¿s City of Night (1963), Toni Morrison¿s Jazz (1992), Paul Auster¿s Oracle Night (2003), and Manuel Muñoz¿s What You See in the Dark (2011) in combination with ongoing reading of sections of Buenas Noches, American Culture: Latina/o Aesthetics of Night.

María DeGuzmán is Professor of English & Comparative Literature and founding Director of Latina/o Studies at the University of North Carolina at Chapel

ENGL 224H.001 | Survey of Medieval English Literature, excluding Chaucer
MWF, 1:25 pm - 2:15 pm. Instructor(s): Ted Leinbaugh. Enrollment = 24.
An introduction to English literature from the eighth through the fifteenth century, focusing on the primary works of Old English and Middle English literature. ENGL 224H offers a comprehensive introduction to English literature from its beginnings to the start of the Renaissance. We begin with the earliest preserved works written in Old English (or Anglo-Saxon), a language whose name derives from the Angles, one of several Germanic tribes who occupied Britain from a period dating to the fifth century. Our texts in the first half of the semester include Beowulf, The Dream of the Rood, The Wanderer, The Seafarer, Judith, The Battle of Maldon, Widsith, Andreas, Deor, Wulf and Eadwacer, The Ruin, and The Battle of Brunanburh. Our primary focus as we study these texts will be two key genres of Anglo-Saxon poetry, epic and elegy, genres that have profoundly influenced modern epic high fantasy novels such as The Lord of the Rings and The Game of Thrones. After a brief excursus on the influence of Old English literature on the writings of J.R.R. Tolkien and C.S. Lewis, we then take up the Middle English period and survey the writings of Geoffrey of Monmouth, John Gower, William Langland, Sir Thomas Malory, and

Romanticism, Nature, Catastrophe

"Mary Shelley began Frankenstein in July of 1816, dubbed the "year without a summer" because of global cooling from a recent volcanic eruption. In English 249, we'll study Romantic-period literature, like Mary Shelley's novel, that reflects on Nature's more fearsome prospects, placing it in conversation with the maternal Nature posited by her contemporary William Wordsworth. We'll trace the history behind both views (such as the volcanic eruption noted above) as well as their implications for gender relations, for colonization, for human land-use, and for dietary practices (like vegetarianism). All along we'll be pondering: What do we talk about when we talk about nature, and what difference does it make?

Textbooks: The Norton Anthology of English Literature, tenth edition, Volume D (The Romantic Period); Jane Austen, Sense & Sensibility; Mary Shelley,

ENGL 265H.001 | Literature and Race, Literature and Ethnicity: #BlackLivesMatter and the New Humanism
TR, 2:00 pm - 3:15 pm. Instructor(s): Rebecca Rutledge Fisher. Enrollment = 24.
Inspired and informed by the discourse that has sprung from and around this radical and necessary new humanism, English 265H undertakes an act of engineering that echoes the intersectional activism and thought of #BlackLivesMatter. This course introduces students to a number of works from a variety of intersecting humanist disciplines across the arts and sciences, which students will actively engage through radical (rather than traditional) modes of literary and critical analysis. To this end, English 265 focuses on the following questions:

1. What social and intellectual history serves as the rich soil from which #BlackLivesMatter has emerged?
2. On what prior social movements does this new movement build?

ENGL 266H.001 | Into the Woods: Literature and Nature
MWF, 9:05 am - 9:55 am. Instructor(s): Margaret O'Shaughnessey. Enrollment = 24.
This course focuses on the role of trees in the landscape and the ecosystem of the North Carolina Piedmont. Readings, mainly contemporary nonfiction, explore issues connected with forestry, ecology, urban development, and sustainability. The 30-hour service-learning component of the course involves a partnership with the North Carolina Botanical Garden. Students will conduct a tree survey of a thirteen-acre property near campus recently acquired the NC Botanical Garden to further its conservation mission. In addition to identifying and measuring trees on the site, students will analyze the data collected and prepare a formal report to present to the Botanical Garden. The course is especially suitable for students who enjoy the outdoors, who want deeper

How is diagnosing an illness like solving a crime? Why do descriptions of diseases follow narrative patterns, and why are social problems often characterized as plagues and cancers? How have notions of health and normality resulted in such things as forced sterilization and genocide? What are the cultural meanings associated with life and death? What do the stories we create about disability and disease, about who (and what) has the power to heal, about the fear of death and desire for transcendence, tell us about our culture, our history, and the experience of being human? This course will provide an introduction to Health Humanities, a new area of study that combines methods and topics from literary studies, medicine, cultural studies, and anthropology. We'll read novels, screen films and television episodes, learn about illnesses and treatments, and hear expert speakers as we investigate the close affinities among literary representation, medical science, and clinical practice. We'll also pay close attention to how ideas about sickness have changed over time and across cultures. Topics will include the doctor-patient relationship, medical detection, the rise of psychiatry, illness and social exclusion, epidemics and the outbreak narrative, government eugenics programs, the quest for immortality, and end-of-life care.

This EE (mentored research) and CI (Communication Intensive) course explores the current PlayMakers Repertory Company plays being staged during the Fall 2019 season: Native Son, Dairyland, and the Tony-Award-winning musical Ragtime. We stress original research into these cutting-edge plays, most of which premiered in the last few years. We consider them in terms of literary history; genre; social and cultural contexts; performance, production, and stage; and topical relevance. Possible backstage experience (attending rehearsals, company design presentations, etc) as well as possible interviews with or class visits by theater professionals. Assignments include: mandatory attendance at each PlayMakers play, reading knowledge quizzes. Our emphasis is on the term-long written research project, which can take various forms, as well as oral presentation components for discussion facilitation and the final exam.

Hip-Hop Poetics: Craft, Passion, Possibility in Poems
Professor Gabrielle Calvocoressi

In this class we will study the poetics of hip-hop as a means of making our poems more formally rigorous, more intellectually and emotionally compelling, and more deeply alive and part of the complicated beautiful terrible world. We'll listen to full albums and think about what they have in common with books (and where they diverge). We'll talk about performance poetry and oral tradition and the places where the public and the private meet up, break up, and make new kinds of meaning. We'll think about beats and meter and what we even mean by ¿craft.¿ We'll talk with special guests. This class can count as an Intermediate Poetry class if you are planning to apply for Advanced. It's also just a great class if you want to make poems, beats, lyrics, worlds. Let's get into it. It's going to be a great autumn. (Calvocoressi F19)

"The God(s) of Slavery: Religious Experience in Early African-American Literature

This course is an examination of early African-American literature as it documents the religious experiences and contributions of black writers and artists to larger American spiritual discourse, both before and immediately after Emancipation. In pursuit of our course inquiry, we will mine a variety of texts, including Muslim and Christian slave narratives, Negro spirituals and slave songs, and poetry. Furthermore, in order to take this pursuit outside of the classroom, we will participate in a variety of activities: a visit to North Carolina's largest plantation, Wilson Library's special collections archives, a trip to an Emancipation-era African-American church, and a performance at the Carolina Performing Arts Center. This course will require an immersive commitment to participate in these outside activities, rigorous engagement with a range of primary and secondary source materials, and the bravery to contribute to challenging conversations about the relationship between systematic oppression, atrocity, and religious belief. ENGL 373 Fall 2018 English 373 introduces you to the literature of the American South, moving chronologically from the pre-colonial period to the twenty-first century. We will address the following tasks, all tightly interrelated: ; Examine how southern literature has both reflected and shaped southern culture over the years (and whose southern culture?) ; Explore the myths of the South that its literature has created, championed, challenged, and debunked ; Examine issues of race, class, gender, and intersectionality within the literature ; Observe the changing narratives created about southern literature during the years ; Explore how literary works shape contemporary racial and regional identities ; Explore the ongoing question: "What is southern literature and why do we study it?" ; Explore the evolving concept of "The Global South" The format of the class will be some lecture, small group work, large group discussion, and presentations. Written work will include short assignments and a major paper.

This course examines two of the most widely influential directors in cinema history, Alfred Hitchcock and Stanley Kubrick. As unsurpassed masters of the craft, they expanded the creative resources of the film medium, experimenting with form and provocative ideas while straddling the boundary between popular cinema and art cinema. This course takes their work as an occasion to investigate the concept of authorship in cinema. We will also consider a variety of genres within which these directors operated: suspense thriller, horror, comedy, romance, film noir, war film, and, at least in Kubrick's case, science fiction. We will discuss not only the formal and technical virtuosity of their filmmaking, but also their social critique, their historical consciousness, their philosophical themes, and their controversial treatment of matters of gender and sexuality. The last part of the course will explore films by more recent directors that are Hitchcockian, Kubrickian, or both. Films to be shown include Shadow of a Doubt (Hitchcock, 1943), Rear Window (1954), Vertigo (Hitchcock 1958), Psycho (Hitchcock, 1960), Dr. Strangelove (Kubrick, 1964), 2001: A Space Odyssey (Kubrick, 1968), A Clockwork Orange (Kubrick, 1971), The Shining (Kubrick, 1980), Eyes Wide Shut (Kubrick, 1999), The Silence of the Lambs (Demme, 1991), Mulholland Dr. (Lynch, 2001), Under the Skin (Glazer, 2014), Get Out (Peele, 2017), Phantom Thread (Anderson, 2017), and We Need to Talk About Kevin (Ramsey, 2011). This course satisfies the VP requirement. is a course in popular-songwriting collaboration, a workshop with constant presentation of original songs and close-critiquing of these assignments, which, in turn, will be quite varied, for instance: songs for solo singers; for duos, trios, quartets, and for chorus; ballads, folk, jazz, and blues songs; country, R&B, hip-hop, art songs and character and plot-advancement songs with musical-theatre applications, etc. Course will culminate with a major final project, an album of original class songs recorded by the class in a local, professional recording studio, with several CD copies of the album provided to each class member soon after the conclusion of the term.

.This course revolves around the question of film comedy. While the class will consider the long history of comedy as a narrative form, we'll devote particular focus to the genre's cinematic development, from the silent era of slapstick films and to the screwball comedies of the 1930s, to the politically-minded comedies of the 1960 and 1970s, to current trends in film comedy. Along the way, we'll see films by Charlie Chaplin, Buster Keaton, Elaine May, Nicole Holofcener, Jacques Tati, Leo McCarey, the Coen Brothers, Preston Sturges, and Jordan Peele (among others).

The social and political tenor of the moment has brought the normalization of white nationalist rhetoric into relief. However, Americans have always found creative ways to express a desire to exclude or eradicate the racial other. In this graduate course, students will look at the arc of fiction narratives that have inspired and defined contemporary hate movements in the United States. Starting with Thomas Dixon's neo-Confederate romance The Clansman (1905), we will move through the foundational texts of white nationalism today, including Jean Raspail's refugee apocalypse The Camp of the Saints (1973), William Pierce's race-war account The Turner Diaries (1978), and Ward Kendall's globalization dystopia Hold Back This Day (2001). We will also examine those mainstream works that have been adopted into the white nationalist canon, including Anthony Burgess's A Clockwork Orange (1962) and Chuck Palahniuk's Fight Club (1996). Finally, our discussion will be contextualized using social critiques like J.D. Vance's Hillbilly Elegy and Vegas Tenold's Everything You Love Will Burn. By the end of the semester, students will have the capacity to understand the place of this literary subculture within the larger body of contemporary American cultural production and the urgent discourses of race and violence that animate it. Students should have a high tolerance for disturbing content and a spirit of critical curiosity.

ENGL 763: Introduction to Health Humanities
Dr. Kym Weed
Tuesdays, 11:00am-1:50pm in HHIVE (GL 524)

Course Description

This interdisciplinary graduate seminar will introduce students to topics and methods in health humanities. In recent years, scholars have sought to define the field of health humanities as a broader and more inclusive set of research practices and objects of study than related fields like medical humanities. Therefore, this course will sample critical and creative texts that represent this field-expanding trend. Students will read foundational texts in health

This course will be part seminar, part workshop, and will focus on research methods (such as archival research, rhetorical criticism, and cultural analysis, etc.) We will consider ALL research methods commonly used in English studies, which include those in Rhetoric and Composition. The types of methods discussed will be tailored toward the interests and projects of the students enrolled in the course.

To be successful, you must already have done all the research for a project or have a draft of a project etc. For example, a seminar paper from a graduate course could be converted into an article. The goal of the course is for students to complete or publish a significant writing project that uses an identifiable method; a journal article (with target journal in mind), a proposal, a dissertation chapter, etc.

Each course meeting will be composed of three parts: (1) Seminar; with methods presentation and discussion; (2) ¿Works in Progress¿ presentations; (3) Workshop Activities.

Today, we see "Great Britain" imploding, shearing off its connections with Europe and threatening to "devolve" into its constituent parts: England, Scotland, Wales, and Ireland (or some parcel of it). But long before it came into being as a political entity, "Britain" was vividly and intricately imagined by literary writers. In this course, we will consider how poets and dramatists of the early modern period handled the "matter of Britain." We will read works from around the "British Isles," but focusing mostly on those that speak to the interconnections among its literatures. Thus, for instance, we'll read the poetry of Ben Jonson alongside the poetry of Scottish poet William Drummond, and selections from Edmund Spenser's Fairie Queene together with bardic verse (in translation). Other texts will include Michael Drayton's Poly-Olbion; William Shakespeare's Henry IV, Part One, Henry V, Macbeth, Cymbeline, and Lear; Robert Armin's The Valiant Welshman; masques by Jonson; poetry by Thomas Churchyard, Sir John Harington, Richard Nugent, Andrew Marvell, Katherine Philips, and Henry Vaughan, among others; and prose by Spenser, John Temple, and John Milton. Our goal will be to discover, in this variegated literature, both the creative energies that brought "Britain" together and the tensions that are straining it now.

In this seminar we'll be thinking about the political implications of poetry that does not necessarily address political questions overtly. In 1839 Elizabeth Barrett was thinking about whether/how poetry should speak to the present moment when she wrote in a letter about popular unrest, "dreadful conflicts between the military & the populace" and "all such horrors as may be said or sung." If such topics were to be "sung," she realized that even poetry so exquisitely beautiful and musical as Tennyson's "does not harmonize the land!" Tennyson himself would write soon after the 1832 passage of the Great Reform Bill that contemporary poets should "dedicate themselves to the "civic Muse," but his major works often displaced the day's controversies to settings in Classical antiquity or the Arthurian world of the Middle Ages. And how did Robert Browning in his dramatic monologues (often set in the Italian Renaissance) speak to the challenges of the English present? Reading a range of works by Barrett Browning, Tennyson, and Browning, we will be thinking about how they were "political" even when aesthetically preoccupied and apparently remote.

ENGL 841 Seminar in Romantic Literature and Art

Description:

This interdisciplinary course examines the revolutions in aesthetics and technologies of representation characteristic of British, American, and European Romanticism. It will discuss the productions, experiments, and aesthetic theories of Wordsworth, Coleridge, Constable, Turner, Burke, Gilpin, Reynolds, and Blake, focusing on the developments of lyrical poetry, landscape painting, and original printmaking. We will pay special attention to the period's primary aesthetic and cultural issues, including the phenomenon of the picturesque and new ideas about the sublime and nature, the democratization of the arts, social role of the artist, the concepts of genius, originality, and spontaneity, and the problem of representation. By paying special attention to qualities

How should we analyze the literary productions of the adult children in the storied James family? The tight-knit James siblings were (as Henry James put it) "such a picture of differences, and withal so fused and united and interlocked." This course will examine how Alice, William, and Henry James, taken collectively, engaged with a rich array of ideas that have important resonance with trends in literary studies today: about human consciousness, embodiment, disability, affect, kinship, and object relations. Across different genres, but with intimacy both intellectual and affective, the three writers disrupted, dramatized, and experimented with habits of thought and modes of expression. Investigating the serious playfulness of their literary practices will provide the occasion to test out enticing new interpretive practices, e.g. Terence Cave, Thinking with Literature: Toward a Cognitive Literary Criticism; Caroline Levine, Forms: Whole, Rhythm, Hierarchy, Network; Rita Felski, The Limits of Critique; Joan Richardson, Pragmatism and Literary Criticism. By thinking with as well as about the Jameses, we'll have the opportunity to explore twenty-first century ideas about the human mind and the potency of literary expression

The course is organized around the question of comedy—as matter of taste, affect, genre, and philosophy. We'll return to classical sources, consider the place of comedy in broader aesthetic accountings, venture into questions of play and improvisation, and analyze the narrative and political dimensions of the genre. In so doing, we'll draw on various media (literary, cinematic, televisual, digital) to consider comedy as a ¿popular¿ and, arguably, a philosophical genre. Texts for the class are likely to include:

Austen, Emma
Berlant, ¿Humorlessness (Three Monologues and a Hairpiece)¿
Ngai, ¿Theory of the Gimmick¿
Aristophanes, Lysistrata

This graduate seminar introduces students to various significations, poeses (including ecopoetics) / practices, and implications of everyday ¿LatinX environmentalisms¿ ¿ the ¿LatinX¿ and the ¿environmentalisms¿ (plural) in relation to one another and together, exponentially. We will consider how these LatinX environmentalisms engage histories of colonialism, lived experiences of neo-colonialism, and figure the intersection of nature and culture in terms of the effects of the Anthropocene and the struggle for environmental justice. We will consider a variety of critical approaches, a range of literary genres (nonfiction, novels, short stories, drama, and poetry), visual productions (film, photography, installation art, mural art, and other public art), and some youth development, place-based environmental literacy projects. We will consider the ways in which these LatinX environmentalisms both contribute to and also differ from Anglo American culture¿s hegemonic environmentalism (with its focus on conservation, preservation, and wilderness). And, we will strive to develop a nuanced understanding of the plurality of approaches within LatinX environmentalisms as indicated by our primary texts, visual productions, and critical readings.

ENGL 875: Critical Race Theory-Graduate Seminar

Dr. Meta Jones

Theory, Genre, and Memory/Memoir in "Black" Diaspora Literature and Art

What theories or genres best delineate the dynamics of diaspora as a process of literal, literary and visual travel--and of imaginative memory? How do contemporary writers and visual artists practice diaspora poetically? What are the aesthetic investments of disparate writers and theorists and how do these investments illuminate or obscure the embodiment of ¿blackness¿ in diasporic thought and practice? Each of the poets, novelists, journalists, legal scholars--and especially memoirist/auto/bio/critographers we will read and photographers, painters and sculptures we'll view evoke the historical

ECON 410H.002 | Intermediate Theory: Price and Distribution

TR, 11:00 am - 12:15 pm. Instructor(s): Gary Biglaiser. Enrollment = 24.

The primary focus of the course is on the function of markets and how markets work to allocate resources and distribute income. Topics included in the course are consumer behavior including economic uncertainty, theory of the firm, market structure (perfect competition, monopoly, and oligopoly), and basic game theory and information economics. One of the purposes of the course is to help students learn how to apply microeconomic principles to economic questions. For this reason, problem sets are assigned and considered to be an important part of the course. The honors section is offered in order to provide students with the opportunity to gain a somewhat greater breadth and depth of knowledge than in other sections. Calculus will be used.

PREREQUISITES: ECON 101. MATH 231 OR STOR 113.

NOTE: WAIT LISTING FOR FALL 2019 HONORS COURSES HAS BEEN SUSPENDED. BEGINNING MONDAY, AUGUST 19, YOU MUST OBTAIN WRITTEN INSTRUCTOR PERMISSION FOR ANY HONORS COURSE YOU WISH TO JOIN. YOU ARE REQUIRED TO DELIVER A HARD-COPY OF THE PERMISSION NOTE TO THE HONORS CAROLINA OFFICE IN 225 GRAHAM MEMORIAL.

ENEC 201H.143 | Introduction to Environment and Society

MWF, 10:10 am - 11:00 am; Recitation: M, 3:35 pm - 4:25 pm OR M, 3:35 pm - 4:25 pm. Instructor(s): Greg Gangi. Enrollment = 18.

This course will explore changing human-environmental relations from a variety of social, geographical, and historical settings. While some lectures do include material from the natural sciences this is a social science class. The class cuts across a large number of disciplines in a manner that is integrative rather than segregating lessons from different academic disciplines into separate lectures. The focus of this course is in the first half of the class to give students familiarity with how humans and human organizations deal with issues of sustainability. The second half of the semester will explore some critical issues like population, food security, climate change, urban planning and transitioning to a low carbon economy. This part of the course will not only give student information important background information about the problems but also highlight possible solutions.

In addition, to weekly class lectures, students will attend a one-hour recitation session to enjoy small-group discussion and to explore related topics of

TITLE: Blackness in Europe

GEN EDS: LA, GL

DESCRIPTION:

This seminar deals with how encounters between Europe and the African Diaspora changed notions of race, nation, identity and belonging in the 20th and 21st centuries. Despite the heterogeneous cultures existing within its borders, for centuries Europe has thought of itself as a white, Christian continent. Yet, Europe has also represented an attractive destination for people of African descent. Furthermore, Europeans' tendency to imagine themselves as white did not foreclose their acceptance and even celebration of Black culture. Today, as minority populations increase and the EU rethinks the permeability of its borders considering the ongoing refugee crisis, Europeans are faced with the task of breaking away from earlier narrow thinking in order to accept its

The course will consist of lectures, student participation, and hands-on practical experiences offered at different Chapel Hill Carrboro City School sites.

The lecture will present a specific body of knowledge and information related to the Adapted Physical Education Process with time made available for questions and discussion. In order to receive the hands-on practical experiences, class members will have the opportunity to select from various school-based adapted physical education classes. These classes will be held Tuesday morning during the regular class period and other time slots available throughout the week. School and community based Adapted physical Education classes with students from all school levels (elementary, middle, and high), and various disabilities will be accessible for your selection.

DESCRIPTION:

This seminar focuses on understanding the physical geography of mountain environments and the processes that have created them, shaped them, and sustained them. There are several reasons for studying the environments of mountains: (a) they reveal integrative earth systems processes that can be readily observed and understood; (b) the processes are not oversimplified, but have spatial complexity at scales that can be methodically analyzed; and (c) mountains often reveal the intricate dynamics of coupled human-natural systems. We will explore mountain environments by concentrating on processes that shape the landscape, patterns that are apparent because of those active processes, and how the concept of scale (both through space and time) define the patterns that we observe when go on a hike or when we drive across the country. We will draw examples from different environments, including the Appalachian Mountains, the Rocky Mountains, and the Andes.

DESCRIPTION:

This seminar examines the ways that politics, especially contests over territory, are part of our day-to-day life. We will explore a range of cases, from immigration policy and rhetoric in the US, to popular representations of geopolitics in film, to the politics of family planning in India. How do questions of love, friendship, family and youth identity tie into the international and national political stories that we see on the news? What does national identity have to do with our individual sense of self? We will also explore alternative ways that international politics have been studied, as feminist geopolitics or anti-geopolitics and questions of citizenship. Work for the seminar will involve original research on intersections of international politics and students' daily life, as well as exploring representations of geopolitical issues in the media, film and fiction.

REGISTRATION PROCEDURES:

Beginning in mid-April 2019, incoming first-year (FY) students will fill out an academic interest survey, which allows students to share their top ten FYS

TITLE: Island Ecosystem and Threats to Sustainability

GEN EDS: PL, GL

DESCRIPTION:

The emphasis of the course will be on the geography of islands and island archipelagos and the social, political, economic, cultural, and environmental forces of change. Cultural encounters, innovation, struggle, adaptation, identity, and representation in indigenous, colonial, and post-colonial histories of islands also will be examined. In addition, the pressures and circumstances of islands will be studied through a focus on the forces of globalization. Island type and island site and situation will be examined through several theoretical lenses, including, bio-complexity, political ecology, island biogeography, and land change science, to assess contemporary conditions and future trajectories of change. Island populations, communities, economic

GEOL 072H.001 | Field Geology of Eastern California

TR, 2:00 pm - 3:15 pm. Instructor(s): Drew Coleman. Enrollment = 20.

Have you ever wanted to stand on a volcano, see a glacier, trace out an earthquake fault, or see the Earth's oldest living things? This seminar is designed around a one-week field trip to eastern California, where students will study geologic features including active volcanoes, earthquake-producing faults, and evidence for recent glaciation and extreme climate change. Before the field trip (which will take place the week of Fall Break and be based at a research station near Bishop, California), the class will meet twice a week to learn basic geologic principles and to work on developing field research topics. During the field trip students will work on field exercises (e.g. mapping, measuring, and describing an active fault; observing and recording glacial features) and collect data for the research projects. After the field trip, students will obtain laboratory data from samples collected during the trip and test research hypotheses using field and laboratory data. Grading will be based on presentation of group research projects, and on a variety of small projects during the trip (notebook descriptions, mapping projects, etc.). Students will be required to pay some of the costs of the trip (estimated at about $1000). NOTE: WAIT LISTING FOR FALL 2019 HONORS COURSES HAS BEEN SUSPENDED. BEGINNING MONDAY, AUGUST 19, YOU MUST OBTAIN WRITTEN INSTRUCTOR PERMISSION FOR ANY HONORS COURSE YOU WISH TO JOIN. YOU ARE REQUIRED TO DELIVER A HARD-COPY OF THE PERMISSION NOTE TO THE HONORS CAROLINA OFFICE IN 225 GRAHAM MEMORIAL.

DESCRIPTION:

Rising sea level and severe storms continue to cause coastal erosion yet coastal areas are more populated than ever. In light of this, what is the future of the American beach and beaches worldwide? In this seminar we will investigate the evolution and function of coastal environments over geologic time. We will also consider the recent effects of development and engineering solutions on coastal environments. We will then examine the factors that have led to existing coastal management strategies and the tensions between coastal development and the desire to preserve natural coastal environments. A mixture of readings, lecture, hands-on activities, lively class discussions, and role play exercises will provide a variety of means for interacting with course material.

REGISTRATION PROCEDURES:

Beginning in mid-April 2019, incoming first-year (FY) students will fill out an academic interest survey, which allows students to share their top ten FYS

TITLE: Sound Scape of Our World

GEN EDS: PL, EE, QI

DESCRIPTION:

Let's open our ears and minds and listen to the world around us. What is the difference between a bird song and a violin? The roar of a crowd at a sporting event and an exploding volcano? This seminar will explore sound: we will develop an appreciation of our acoustic environment. Instruction will be exploration based and we will learn how to record acoustic sounds in natural and man-made environments. What are signals? What is noise? How are sound signals perceived by our ears and also analyzed scientifically? We will explore the various bands of acoustic communication and the ambient signals that comprise our sound environment. Field observations will be a major focus, where we will record our own data on personal cell phones (or computers) as well

DESCRIPTION:

This course deals with critical issues, in the broadest possible context, that dominated the twentieth century: the rise of fascism out of the carnage of World War One and the Bolshevik revolution to which the war and Czarist Russia's involvement in it helped contribute. As the semester unfolds, drawing on a variety of historical and documentary films, and literature (memoirs, novels), we will take a comparative look at singular personalities like Lenin, Stalin and Hitler and examine the role played by such key figures in historical events of this magnitude. More towards the end of the semester, we glance briefly at the situation created in Western and Eastern Europe by the defeat of fascism and contemplate the origins and evolution of the cold war. We conclude with a consideration of the dissolution and democratization of Eastern European countries, the collapse of the Soviet Union, and, against the tragic background of the past, the recent reemergence of conflict between Russia and the West.

GSL 068H.001 | Intensity, Vitality, Ecstasy: Affects in Literature, Film, and Philosophy
TR, 12:30 pm - 1:45 pm. Instructor(s): Gabriel Trop. Enrollment = 24.

Intensity, Vitality, Ecstasy in Philosophy and Literature

What cultural and intellectual resources do we have to increase the intensity of our inner lives, to feel more vitally plugged into the world, and to be attracted to extraordinary modes of perception? We will read texts by famous philosophers, mystics, and poets in order to help us answer these questions. Assignments will explore creative and alternative forms of writing (rather than the standard academic essay): dialogues, narratives, letters, and free writing, among others. Authors include: Plato, Sappho, Marcus Aurelius, Hildegard von Bingen, Mechthild von Magdeburg, Meister Eckhart, Descartes, Pascal, Goethe, Kafka, Musil, Deleuze, and Rilke, among others. (Course taught in English. No prerequisites.)

FIRST YEAR STUDENTS ONLY

DESCRIPTION:

This seminar explores the question of the animal in the works of major Russian writers (Gogol, Dostoevsky, Tolstoy, Turgenev, Chekhov) and introduces students to the main theoretical texts on the animal/human relationship (Nietzsche, Levinas, Derrida, Irigaray). Among the topics to be discussed are the animal as the other, animal and human natures, dominance and submission, ethics of the human/animal relations, and the theme of talking animals.

The course's main goals are:

- To follow the representation of the animal in Russian literature of the nineteenth and twentieth centuries;
- To examine the worlds of major Russian writers;
- To learn the methods of analyzing literature;

DESCRIPTION:

Time and the Medieval Cosmos will introduce first-year students to the basic motions of the solar system as viewed from the Earth and the mechanical and mathematical models used to reproduce them. The course will also immerse students in the world of medieval and early modern education, theology, and natural philosophy, challenging them to understand the historical conditions that shaped views of the cosmos in the premodern world. Last but not least, the class will raise broader questions about the relationship between faith and reason, along with the role of institutional authorities in determining the boundaries of acceptable knowledge.

Students may also register for this course under PHYS 50.001.

DESCRIPTION:

This seminar explores the problem of revolutionary upheaval in Latin American history. Why did people like Simón Bolívar, Pancho Villa, Che Guevara, and Fidel Castro take up arms, and what has been the impact of the insurgencies they helped lead? This explores these and other questions by examining the various causes, manifestations, and outcomes of revolutionary violence in modern Latin American history. Students will develop their interpretive skills through a close reading of English-language primary sources from the wars of the independence to the guerrilla insurgencies of the late-20th century. The seminar begins with an exploration of the wars of independence (1810-1825). Students will then analyze the twentieth-century revolutions in Mexico (1910-1917), Cuba (1953-1959), and Nicaragua (1979). The course concludes with an exploration of the late-20th century guerrilla insurgencies of the Shining Path (Peru), FARC (Colombia), and Zapatistas (Mexico).

DESCRIPTION:

"Class" has been the subject of more mystification, misunderstanding, and ill-informed political disagreement than perhaps any other social category. Especially in the American South, the notion of fundamental class differences may seem antithetical to the aspirations, or even claims, for a class-less society. Yet differences in occupation, income, wealth, the habits of everyday life, and definitions of the ¿good life¿ clearly remain. This course examines how class experiences and debates over the meaning of work have shaped the postbellum Southern United States. Technological innovation, the emergence of a consumer economy, and the evolution of popular culture all have made and remade class identities and influenced ideas about the South as a region as well as the racial, gender, and sexual identities of its people. Students in this course will develop new perspectives on the South in American history. They will also cultivate skills (oral and written), using history as a way of learning to analyze the past and inform the present.

TITLE: Diaries, Memoirs and Testimonies of the Holocaust

GEN EDS: HS, NA

DESCRIPTION:

In ghettos and hiding places during the Holocaust, European Jews and other victims of Nazism recorded their experiences in diaries and other chronicles. Efforts to preserve individual histories continued after the war as survivors wrote memoirs and gave oral testimonies beginning in the earliest postwar years. In this course, students will read diaries, memoirs and literature as well as listen to oral histories to understand the history of the Holocaust through life narratives and to explore tensions between history and memory.

HIST 174H.001 | The Global Order from World War II to the Present

T, 3:30 pm - 6:00 pm. Instructor(s): Klaus Larres. Enrollment = 24.

This course deals with the establishment and development of the rules-based global since the end of the Second World War. The course will help us to understand the driving forces, fears and ideas that have led to the post-war global order and the emergence of new states and international organizations. We will discuss this system as well as the forces of nationalism, imperialism, just war ideas, great power theories, and many related themes. The course has three main parts: 1. Establishment and outline of the Bretton Woods System (the 'Washington consensus'); 2. Outline and analysis of the most important international institutions and intergovernmental organizations that have remained relevant in today's global order; 3. Analysis of the challenges to the rules-based global order that have emerged in the 21st century. The course will cover the years from 1944 to the present. Geographically the course will focus above all on the U.S., Europe/Russia, and Asia (with a particular focus on China).

HIST 177H.001 | Voices of Italian Renaissance

TR, 2:00 pm - 3:15 pm. Instructor(s): Melissa Bullard. Enrollment = 24.

This seminar-style course will examine Renaissance texts (in translation) from Petrarch to Machiavelli and explore their historical and cultural contexts. Traditionally the period from the 14th century to the early 16th century in Italy has been seen as the foundation of modernity, of heroic individualism and consummate artistic expression, but our Renaissance voices also reveal thoughtful men and women struggling to redefine themselves in a changing world, a world increasingly dominated by patronage and patriarchy, by plague, war, and urban unrest, and by challenges to existing political, religious, and intellectual authorities and their systems of representation. In addition to a close reading and discussion of select Renaissance texts, students will have opportunity to conduct independent historical research and present their findings. We will also devote a session to examining Renaissance paintings in the Ackland Museum and learn how to view them as texts that beckon us to reconstruct their appropriate contexts. Requirements include short critical evaluations of assigned readings, helping to lead class discussion in groups, a research project and presentation.

NOTE: WAIT LISTING FOR FALL 2019 HONORS COURSES HAS BEEN SUSPENDED. BEGINNING MONDAY, AUGUST 19, YOU MUST OBTAIN WRITTEN INSTRUCTOR PERMISSION FOR ANY HONORS COURSE YOU WISH TO JOIN. HIST 390-001: Special Topics in History: Sisters in the Struggle

This course will examine women in leadership roles, political prisoners, and grass roots organizers. It will explore movements growing out of the centuries-long Freedom/Black Liberation Struggles and movements focused on a cause célèbre. Women in movements as leaders, foot soldiers, and symbolizing causes will be examined for the purpose of understanding racial justice, radical, and/or life-jeopardizing activism of African American women.

HIST 395-001: Race & Memory at UNC

1.0 credit hour (Wednesday, 5 - 5:50 PM) and pass/fail

History 395: Race & Memory at UNC will provide an overview of the history of race and memory at the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill. Through a trove of original documents and expert guest-speakers, students will engage with more than 200 years of university history and gain an advanced understanding of the contemporary challenges and opportunities of studying that history.

HIST 395-002: The Third Reich in Power: Hitler, Germany, and the Road to World War II
1.0 credit hour course, Pass/Fail

This class is about the course of German history from 1933-1939.

Using primary sources, we will witness the destruction of a democratic society, the reign of Adolf Hitler, and the Road to World War II.

The class will be taught in a collaborative setting, which means that students will be focused on participation and engagement in classroom discussions, rather than completing extensive writing assignments or exams.

What was it like to live through (or die in) the Civil War? What difference did it make if one was a Federal or a Confederate, soldier or civilian, white or black, free or slave, male or female? How did the war fit into contemporary political and social beliefs? How do we get at the subjective experiences of the war?

HIST 398-002: Women, Nazi Germany, and the Holocaust: Experiences and Memories

This seminar focuses on the history of Nazi Germany, World War II and Holocaust from the perspective of women's and gender history. We will study how the major changes in politics, economy, society and culture during this period affected women's lives in Nazi Germany and the occupied territories of Europe, how different groups of women and individual woman experienced these changes, responded to them, and remembered them. The overarching theme is the variety of women's experiences and memories as opponents, perpetrators and persecuted of the Third Reich inside and outside of Nazi Germany. Students will explore this theme in their own research for their seminar paper by analyzing women's autobiographies, diaries and letters, oral history interviews (available online), and other primary documents as well as secondary literature.

HIST 398-003: Leisure-Time in the Making of Modern America

Leisure-time blossomed with the rise of an industrial economy and later became a source of profit as consumption expanded over the course of the twentieth century. We will use the array of activities and entertainments Americans pursued beyond the workplace to gain insight about these developments. The growth of leisure as commercial activity did generate reliable, even lucrative, employment for some. With these issues in mind, we will consider how leisure-time fostered modern outlooks and habits. Our inquiry will focus roughly on the period between 1880 and 1945. The required texts for the course will provide us with rich resources for exploring the role leisure-time played in the making of modern America. Some of your most valuable learning, however, will take place outside the classroom as you undertake original historical research and analysis. Each of you will write a 20-25-page research paper on some aspect of leisure. You will have an opportunity to choose your topic and conduct original research using primary and secondary sources. We will spend a good deal of time throughout the semester learning how to research, write and re-write a paper of this length.

HIST 398-006: Nazi Germany: A View from the Sources

This is a seminar on Nazi Germany, based on the documents and images available on the website of the German Historical Institute in Washington, DC. Looking at primary sources will allow students to go beyond the many myths about the Third Reich and formulate their own judgement about controversial issues. Topics covered are the Nazi seizure of power, the establishment of the dictatorship, Hitler's Blitzkrieg, the Holocaust and the ultimate German defeat. There will also be time for discussion of social trends, economic patterns and cultural life. Students have to do one oral presentation of a key document and write a seminar paper, based on actual research as well as secondary literature.

HIST 398-007: Cold War Summits

At key moments of the Cold War, world leaders met face-to-face to try to solve international crises and lay the foundations for peace. In some cases they succeeded, in others they failed. Regardless of the outcome, each of these meetings, from the end of the Second World War to the end of the Cold War, had profound consequences for the course of international politics. This seminar examines the most consequential summit meetings of the postwar era and considers the potential and the limits of diplomacy at the highest level.

HIST 398 sections are restricted to History majors until two weeks into the enrollment period.

At that time the restrictions will be removed and all students, regardless of major, will be able to enroll if there are seats available.

HIST 398-008: The Russian Revolution and its Impact on World History

Arguably the most important event of the 20th century, the Russian Revolution ended centuries of tsarist autocracy and established the world's first socialist state. I want to encourage students in this writing seminar to investigate how the "Great October Socialist Revolution," as 1917 was known in the Soviet Union, impacted world history. After all, the Russian Revolution not only inspired liberation movements in countries shedding the yoke of colonialism, but also reform movements such as the New Deal in our own country. This approach will greatly increase the body of primary sources available to students and will also allow them to combine any interest they might have in the Russian Revolution with other events in world history.

HNRS 350.001 | Learning the Art of Medicine

T, 6:00PM - 7:00PM. Instructor(s): Rick Stouffer. Enrollment = 12.

This course is designed to supplement knowledge obtained through the traditional pre-medical curriculum in order to enhance students' development as health care providers. It has five objectives:

1) To introduce students to non-biological factors that affect the health of individuals and society. Understanding the social situation of your patient, including environmental, financial and familial factors, is important for the effective practice of medicine. Just to give one example of the importance of understanding these factors: studies have shown that patients do not take up to one third of medications that are prescribed and implement only a small portion of lifestyle changes (e.g. dietary changes or smoking cessation). Unfortunately, physicians tend to focus on what happens in their offices and on treating only the biological factors contributing to disease. A better understanding of a patient's social situation is necessary if the therapies that are discussed in the physician's office are to be implemented once the patient goes home.

HNRS 352.001 | The Carolina Global Food Program Seminar in Food and Culture

TR, 3:30PM - 6:00PM. Instructor(s): James Ferguson / Samantha Buckner Terhune. Enrollment = 15.

¿Take a cooking class in college and get credit? Sign me up!¿ Thus often begins a 5 minute- to 2 hour conversation on Honors 352-001, When we first offered the class in 1997, it was a slightly naïve and timid enquiry into food and culture. Since 9/11/2001, the economic meltdown in 2008 and recovery since, and the recent Farm Bill, developing and sustaining a vital interest in the sourcing, preparation, consumption, sharing, and preservation of our daily bread has become an urgent concern for us. If one cannot eat sustainably there is no point in worrying about finance. Malthus will be proven correct.

Fall 2019 continues our recent trajectory of an introduction to scientific method and health affairs through a sweep through nutrition, eating disorders, epidemiology, biochemistry, and evolutionary biology. We examine such topics as the ethics of eating a diverse and sustainable diet, slow vs. industrial food, organic, and local food sourcing as well as the grim reapers of climate driven crop and water shortages and rampant obesity with its implication for NOTE: WAIT LISTING FOR FALL 2019 HONORS COURSES HAS BEEN SUSPENDED. # HNRS 352.002 | Current Challenges in Criminal Justice

M, 2:00 pm - 4:30 pm. Instructor(s): John Rubin. Enrollment = 18.

We will consider current challenges facing, and sometimes created, by the criminal justice system. We will look at criminal justice policies and practices in North Carolina and the U.S. generally and explore their effectiveness and impact, including their impact on people accused of a crime. Each class or sequence of classes will examine a different set of issues. Do poor people have equal access to justice? Is policing nondiscriminatory? How should we treat people who have mental health problems and commit crimes? How well can people resume their lives after their involvement with the criminal justice system? We will explore these topics through a combination of readings, class discussions, guest lectures and, logistics permitting, site visits. The course will culminate in student-led presentations on topics of the students' choosing.

HNRS 353.001 | Slavery and the University

T, 2:00PM - 4:30PM. Instructor(s): James Leloudis. Enrollment = 24.

Across the country, colleges and universities are wrestling with the legacies of slavery on their campuses. This is painful history that we must acknowledge and come to terms with, particularly if we are to fulfill the promise of a public university. I serve as a co-chair of the task force appointed by Chancellor Folt to research, document, and teach a full and inclusive account of Carolina's past. This course is designed to contribute to that work.

This course will be somewhat unconventional, in that we will spend most of our class sessions in the University Archives, the North Carolina Collection, and the Southern Historical Collection (all located in Wilson Library) working on research. University historian Cecelia Moore, History doctoral student Brian Fennessy, and I will be on hand to coach and assist you in developing fruitful lines of inquiry, identifying sources, discerning patterns of evidentiary significance, and framing historical insights.

HNRS 353.003 | Environment and Environmentalism in Modern South Asia

TR, 3:30 pm - 4:45 pm. Instructor(s): Erica Mukherjee. Enrollment = 24.

This course examines the history of South Asia through an environment lens, exploring how the relationship between humans and the environment influenced and was influenced by imperialism, nationalism, and social justice. It casts the environment as more than a backdrop to the human struggle of dominance and resistance and demonstrates how both the material and imagined environment is an active player in shaping the past and present of South Asia. Much of the course will focus on the often-contested relationship between the state and the people and the ways in which control of the environment influenced the dynamics of this relationship. Students will read a wide variety of primary and secondary sources, participate in classroom discussion, and create several pieces of writing.

HNRS 354.001 | The Elements of Politics I: Ancients (Greeks)

MW, 3:35PM - 4:50PM. Instructor(s): Larry Goldberg. Enrollment = 24.

A contemporary thinker has said that all education is being introduced to greatness. That is the primary aim of this course, which will examine the political principles of the Greek writers. Our fundamental goal will be to observe great thinkers sifting the claims of religion and the polity, the individual and the community, tradition and philosophy, philosophy and politics. We will read poems by Solon, Homer's Iliad or Odyssey, Sophocles' Antigone, selections from Herodotus's Persian Wars, Thucydides' History of the Peloponnesian War and Xenophon's Memorabilia, and several works by Plato: Apology, Crito, Meno, Republic, Gorgias, and Phaedrus. There will be several short papers and a final essay of six to ten pages. Daily class preparation is expected since the course will be conducted as a seminar. This class is open to students at all levels, Freshman through Senior year. The sole requirement is a willingness to work hard and not fall behind. All students must obtain my approval for enrollment. This course was developed with the aid of a Paul and Melba Brandes Course Development Award.

TITLE: Science and Society: The Hidden Forces That Drive Scientific Inquiry

GEN EDS: SS, CI

DESCRIPTION:

Many people believe that scientifically derived knowledge represents the ultimate unbiased truth, free from outside influence. While it is true that scientific methods have revolutionized what we know about our world, these methods are far from unbiased; there are powerful cultural and psychological forces that shape the production, interpretation, and application of scientific knowledge.

Led by a three-person teaching team with expertise in science policy, psychology, and biophysics, this interdisciplinary seminar will examine well-known

LING 089H.001 | Human and Artificial Intelligence Through the Prism of Language

TR, 11:00 am - 12:15 pm. Instructor(s): Katya Pertsova / Mohit Bansal. Enrollment = 12.

The development of AI on the one hand is motivated by solving concrete practical problems. On the other hand, AI has important implications for our understanding of humanity and human intelligence, as well as the nature of knowledge and meaning. Because language is at the center of human ability to reason, communicate, and encode knowledge, many current advances in AI are focused on linguistic technologies -- after all, we hope to be able to communicate and interact with the intelligence that we create. Thus, understanding how language works, how it is shaped by facts of human cognition as well as social interaction is important for developing human-friendly AI. At the same time, machine learning tools used in AI can also be useful in the scientific study of language, for example for testing hypotheses about laws that govern human language acquisition, language change, and language use. The goal of this course is to expose students, not necessarily familiar with either of the two disciplines, to these two complementary and mutually beneficial approaches. Students will get a basic understanding of the progress that has been made in linguistics and computer science at modeling language in the

DESCRIPTION:

This seminar will introduce students to the nature of the Earth's oceans and atmosphere, and describe the processes that lead to our weather patterns and global climate. Emphasis is placed on understanding how the oceans and atmosphere affect human population, how oceanic and atmospheric changes are linked to increasing human activity, and how these changes can affect you. Basic principles and modern theories of changing climate, severe weather events, oceanic hazards, and interactions between the oceans and the atmosphere will be studied. Examples of presently active research being conducted at UNC and at other institutions will be used to highlight how the above topics are investigated scientifically. Readings will be taken from introductory textbooks on meteorology, oceanography and environmental sciences; and modern articles in periodicals such as Scientific American, Nature, American Scientist, National Geographic, Bulletin of the American Meteorological Society, and Weatherwise. Various websites, including those within the UNC Department of Marine Sciences, will be used. Classroom presentations, seminars, and group discussions and debates will be utilized.

INFORMATION ABOUT THE CLASS:

To learn more about this class, see Fall 2019 FYS Online Brochure: <http://fys.unc.edu/courses/fall-2019-first-year-seminars/>

REGISTRATION PROCEDURES:

Beginning in mid-April 2019, incoming first-year (FY) students will fill out an academic interest survey, which allows students to share their top ten FYS preferences, as well as preferences for other courses with seats reserved for the FY pre-registration process. Beginning in early summer, FY students will be pre-registered in two fall 2019 classes based on their interest survey responses and availability of seats. In July 2019, FY students will then have the opportunity to self-enroll in the remaining FYS seats during their assigned course registration dates. On Wednesday, July 31, one day after the last FY student course registration date has closed, FY open registration begins (all incoming FY students can register or make adjustments to their fall 2019 class schedules in ConnectCarolina).

MATH 231H.001 | Calculus of Functions of One Variable I
TR, 9:30 am - 10:45 am; Recitation: M, 9:05 am - 9:55 am. Instructor(s): Thomas Beck. Enrollment = 25.
Math 231 is designed to provide a detailed introduction to the fundamental ideas of calculus. It does not assume any prior calculus knowledge, but the student is expected to be proficient working with functions and their graphs as well as manipulating variable expressions and solving equations using algebra.
This is the Honors section of Math 231. It offers a more demanding and deeper treatment than the regular sections as well as more involved applications. There will be more emphasis on understanding theory than in other sections, and students will be expected to understand and reproduce proofs of theorems and formulas. In addition, this section will cover extra topics, including the epsilon-delta definition of limit. Applications will be more involved and will sometimes involve real data. Homework will be more challenging, with more emphasis on creative problem solving and less emphasis on drill. Students will be expected to complete a final project.

NOTE: WAIT LISTING FOR FALL 2019 HONORS COURSES HAS BEEN SUSPENDED. BEGINNING MONDAY, AUGUST 19, YOU MUST OBTAIN WRITTEN INSTRUCTOR PERMISSION FOR ANY HONORS COURSE YOU WISH TO JOIN. YOU ARE REQUIRED TO DELIVER A HARD-COPY OF THE PERMISSION NOTE TO THE HONORS CAROLINA OFFICE IN 225 GRAHAM MEMORIAL.

MATH 233H.001 | Calculus of Functions of Several Variables

TR, 12:30 pm - 1:45 pm; Recitation: M, 12:20 pm - 1:10pm. Instructor(s): Jason Metcalfe. Enrollment = 24.

Level: This is the Honors section of MATH 233. It offers a more demanding and deeper treatment than the regular sections. For example, there will be more emphasis on understanding theory than in other sections. Topics: Vectors in three dimensional space. Dot products and cross products and their applications. Functions of two and three variables. Polar and spherical coordinates. Graphs and contours. Multivariable calculus: partial derivatives, gradient. Curves in space. Surfaces: normal vector, tangent plane. Maxima and minima. Lagrange multipliers. Double and triple definite integrals, line integrals, Green's theorem.

PREREQUISITE: AT LEAST A B+ IN MATH 232 AT UNC OR A 5 ON THE BC CALCULUS EXAM.

NOTE: WAIT LISTING FOR FALL 2019 HONORS COURSES HAS BEEN SUSPENDED. BEGINNING MONDAY, AUGUST 19, YOU MUST OBTAIN WRITTEN INSTRUCTOR PERMISSION FOR ANY HONORS COURSE YOU WISH TO JOIN. YOU ARE REQUIRED TO DELIVER A HARD-COPY OF THE PERMISSION NOTE TO THE HONORS CAROLINA OFFICE IN 225 GRAHAM MEMORIAL.

To register for this course, you should let Professor Sawon know your name and PID at the first class session. Note that registering for MATH294 is entirely optional: you don't have to register for MATH294 to participate in these sessions and/or the competitions. In particular, if you don't anticipate attending every week, it would be better not to register. Please let me know by email (sawon@email.unc.edu) if you want to participate and are unable to attend the first session.

Math 294 will be held in Phillips 330, the Math Lounge, Fall 2019.

TR, 2:00 pm - 3:15 pm. Instructor(s): Shrawan Kumar. Enrollment = 24.
Logic and proofs, Sets and Functions, Number theory, Induction, Counting, Discrete probability, and Relations (Chapters 1,2,4,5,6,7 and 9 from Rosen's Discrete Mathematics text).
This is the honors section of math 381. The usual course topics will be treated in a deeper and more demanding manner than in the regular sections. In particular, we will go through strategies for proofs very carefully (Sections 1.7 and 1.8, plus other material from the instructor).

MATH 521H.001 | Advanced Calculus I

TR, 12:30 pm - 1:45 pm. Instructor(s): Mark Williams. Enrollment = 24.

The real numbers, continuity and differentiability of functions of one variable, infinite series, integration. This honors section will explore the topics listed above in greater detail, and additional topics, such as Fourier series and their application, are likely to be covered. Moreover, assignments of greater depth will be given.

PREREQUISITES: MATH 233 AND 381. A GRADE OF A- OR BETTER IN STOR 215 MAY SUBSTITUTE FOR MATH 381.

FIRST YEAR STUDENTS MAY REGISTER WITH INSTRUCTOR PERMISSION ONLY.

Mark Williams does research in partial differential equations with an emphasis on wave phenomena such as shock waves, detonation fronts, and other

NOTE: WAIT LISTING FOR FALL 2019 HONORS COURSES HAS BEEN SUSPENDED. BEGINNING MONDAY, AUGUST 19, YOU MUST OBTAIN WRITTEN INSTRUCTOR PERMISSION FOR ANY HONORS COURSE YOU WISH TO JOIN. YOU ARE REQUIRED TO DELIVER A HARD-COPY OF THE PERMISSION NOTE TO THE HONORS CAROLINA OFFICE IN 225 GRAHAM MEMORIAL.

Title: Data Science for Applied Science and Engineering

Description: This course brings together various topics in data science of particular interest for data analysis across different areas of applied science and engineering. Possible topics will include dimensionality reduction, transforms, clustering, classification, and neural networks.

Instructor approval required. Ideally, students should have taken either BMME 410 or MATH 528 prior to taking this course OR be enrolled in one of those courses for this term. Students without either co-requisite may seek approval if they have other relevant mathematical, statistical, or computational background.

The course on deep learning will start with a review of standard neural networks, and then progress to modern deep learning, including convolutional neural networks, recursive neural networks, generative adversarial networks, and various kinds of autoencoders. We shall discuss training strategies, architecture search, regularization and quantization.

Class meets in Soc-Psych 130 at Duke University.

DESCRIPTION:

This seminar is for students who are interested in how music is made, how sound is produced in instruments, and how those sounds have been used in music making from ancient times to the present day. Students will study the basics of physics and music: wave motion, resonance, the perception of sound, scales, harmony, and music theory. We will conduct four laboratory exercises (called etudes) in which students will work in small groups to investigate the acoustics of string, woodwind and brass instruments. Keyboards and percussion will also be considered, and students can pursue their areas of special interest in a research paper. The final project for each student will be a public performance of an original musical composition for an ensemble of instruments that the students have constructed themselves out of found objects.

Students may also register for this course under PHYS 51.001.

DESCRIPTION:

This seminar is designed to offer students the tools and techniques for understanding multi-media, staged musical works like opera, musical theater, and film. The goal of the seminar is to develop students' analytical skills in verbal and non-verbal media and to encourage their visualization of the potential and implications of artistic forms and structures. No ability to read music is required. We will discuss musical, visual, and textual narratives, source materials, and the various means by which such multi-media artworks are transmitted to modern audiences (e.g., written scores, LPs/CDs, staged performances, movies, etc.). We will focus on music for silent films, and students will create their own soundtracks for silent film scenes.

REGISTRATION PROCEDURES:

Beginning in mid-April 2019, incoming first-year (FY) students will fill out an academic interest survey, which allows students to share their top ten FYS preferences, as well as preferences for other courses with seats reserved for the FY pre-registration process. Beginning in early summer, FY students will

Run Time: 09:49:49

This course asks the question of how we deal with works of art of the past as heard (and seen) with 21st-century sensibilities. We will study a representative selection of pieces in the current repertory of the concert hall from the last 250 years of Western classical music. This course will have two guiding principles: the 'past' begins yesterday, and the art of listening to music 'live or in recorded form' is a skill of active participation in which the listener engages with the artistic process. In addition to historically significant works, this course will make every effort to adapt repertoire selection to coincide with public concerts (free and ticketed) in London and Florence.

In this course we consider the relationship between two concepts;music and politics; broadly, in search of ways in which they elucidate each other as well as resist pairing. The class provides an overview of the major theoretical issues the pairing raises as well as diverse case studies that underscore the range of historical and geographical contexts in which professional musicians, activists, politicians, and civilians have engaged these concerns.
